GREAT OVATION FOR LLOYD GEORGE BY NEW YORKERS

Streets Jammed With Cheering Throngs as Statesman Steps Ashore.

IRISH STAGE PROTEST

Placards Bearing Captions Attacking Great Britain Destroyed by Police as Republican Sympathizers Begin March; Holiday Scenes.

By United Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Lloyd George, Britain's war premier, landed at the Battery at 11:50 A. M. today.

A vast crowd, which jammed the big square and filled the streets leading into it, greeted the British statesman with a roar of cheers as he left the police boat Macom, on which he came up the bay and entered an automobile for the ride to city hall.

Hundreds of American and British flags were waved. From the skyscrapers, long streamers of ticker tape were thrown, giving a carnival aspect to the scene.

Lloyd George grinned broadly and his eyes twinkled as he stepped across the gang-plank. He wore a silk hat and conventional morning dress. His first action before stepping ashore was to shake hands with his honor guard, composed of 16 British World War veterans.

Then he stepped into view of the crowd and a tremendous cheer went up. Thousands of people in the streets, on the roofs of the buildings, joined in yells. "Lloyd George," "Lloyd George", "Lloyd George", mingled with shouts and hand-clapping.

Lloyd George stood for a moment, gazing almost in awe at the spectacle afforded by the great square walled with towering buildings and cheering men and women. Then he flourished his silk hat and stepped into his automobile. With him were his wife and their daughter, Megan.

As the official procession started up the long canyon of lower Broadway, between the ranks of skyscrapers, the air was filled with confetti made of torn paper and long streamers of ticker tape.

Irish Republican sympathizers, gathered at City Hall Park a few minutes before Lloyd George was due to arrive there, and began marching in a long columns displaying placards denouncing Great Britain. Police quickly destroyed the placards and dispersed the marchers.

By the time Lloyd George arrived at the Waldorf Hotel he had been cheered by more than 100,000 persons. Smiling, waving his hat in response to cheers he entered the hotel. The police inspector in charge of the informal procession said the crowd appeared greater than any since the return of the 27th Division.

In his first formal word spoken since he arrived at New York, Lloyd George, in response to a brief speech of welcome by Acting Mayor Hulbert at City Hall, said that much as he has been moved by the warmth and courtesy of the official greetings extended him, what really had touched him was the spontaneous cheer of the common people "from whom I sprang."

After expressing his thanks to President Coolidge for the courtesy in sending a state department official to welcome him, Lloyd George said he had come without any official status "except that of a strenuous life spent fighting the cause of democracy in Europe."

"I am honored to be greeted in this hall, associated as it is with the growth of the democracy of a great people of which Great Britain is as proud as you are."

The ex-premier said he had been struck by the way in which the United States has succeeded in welding together into a great nation the many peoples that come from the old world.

"I have come to see how you have been able to do it," he said.

Lloyd George paid a high tribute to America as the nation that was "re-creating the hope of the world."

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Hailing Lloyd George as a "citizen of the world," Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, today declared America was ready to listen to his advice as to how to "set men's hands to work again and their hearts to singing," after hardships and sorrows of war.

Baker introduced Lloyd George as principal speaker at a luncheon tendered the former British Premier by the United Press. His address included reminiscences of Lloyd George under the tress and strain of war, when he never flinched, even in the darkest days of March, 1918. He said he was amazed at the vitality of the former premier who has borne such responsibility and he adapted to him the words Shakespeare wrote of Cleopatra "age cannot wither him, nor custom stale his infinite variety."

AUTOMOBILE TITLE APPLICATIONS SENT TO STATE MOTORISTS

Special to The Courier.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 5.—The State Highway Department today said that before Monday of next week applications for registration of title will have been mailed to all Pennsylvania owners of automobiles. Each of these applications is accompanied by a letter of instructions. It is urged upon automobile owners that at the same time they fill in the application for registration of title also make application for a 1924 license. This form will be found on the reverse side of the application for title registration.

The applications for registrations are being mailed in a plain white envelope under a permit issued by the Harrisburg Postoffice, and in numerous instances have been mistaken by receivers as an advertisement of some kind. These persons have carelessly thrown aside the envelope without opening it, although the distinctive marking on the upper left-hand corner shows the envelope to be from the State Highway Department. Persons who have thus carelessly thrown away their application must apply for a new blank of the State Highway Department itself, inasmuch as this blank cannot be had of any notary, alderman or justice of the peace.

The Department of Highways today issued notice that undertakers when registering their hearses with the automobile division shall regard them as passenger vehicles and not trucks. Some confusion has existed on this point.

"If all the automobile owners in Pennsylvania will fill out their applications for registration of title immediately—and then fill out the application for license, sending the blank to this division with the necessary amount of money covering both applications, there will be no rush of applications at the close of this year," said Registrar Benjamin G. Eynon today. "Three months remain before the first of the new year. Every car owner in the state should have his blanks before the middle of next week except in cases where the owners have moved or in other cases in which they gave us incorrect information at the time they filed applications for 1923 license. This being true, there is no reason why applications for 1924 license should be delayed."

"Given Blue Tablets," Last Words of Mrs. Webb on Deathbed

By United Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—"I was given blue tablets," These last words of Mrs. Gertie Gorman Webb, uttered shortly before she died of the mysterious malady, will be placed before the White Plains grand jury which is investigating to decide whether she was murdered.

Dr. William J. Mayer, who attended Mrs. Webb in her final illness, is expected to go before the jury Monday and repeat the deathbed conversation he had with the woman.

The report of Dr. Oscar Dottler, the toxicologist who examined Mrs. Webb's organs for indications of poison, resulted in discovery of mercury in the liver, brain and kidneys. Dr. Dottler could not state definitely that this poison caused death as it was in small quantities. Furthermore he could not say positively that it was bichloride. Dr. Dettler's report has been placed before District Attorney Rowland who is examining it in detail today. He will submit it to the grand jury later.

"No work and no pay," declared Childers. "They've got to show me they have worked for the state before I authorize payment of a nickel."

Fayette Red Cross Forwards $13,618 to Japanese Relief Fund

Sums Paid by County Through Other Channels Run Into Thousands.

COUNTY HAS HIGH RATING

A report has been compiled by G. S. Harah, chairman of the Japanese Disaster Relief Committee for Fayette county, showing the amount of money turned in to the committee from the various parts of the county. This report by districts follows:

Brownsville	$ 1,125.59
Connellsville	2,371.03
Dawson	252.00
Dunbar Township	255.52
Fairchance	203.82
Fayette City	412.59
Masontown	315.92
McClellandtown	253.16
New Salem	468.42
Perry Township	558.56
Republic	285.52
Smithfield	239.89
Uniontown	6,046.23
Vanderbilt	146.77
Wharton Township	83.01
Total	$ 13,618.13

In addition to the amount above shown many churches, corporations, organizations and individuals in the county have made contributions to other national associations, newspapers, or direct to the headquarters of the Red Cross in Washington. While it is impossible to determine the exact amount raised in this manner, reports of the committee indicate that sums ranging from $10 to $400 were sent through sources other than the special county committee, and the sum would run into the thousands.

It is interesting to note in connection with the amount raised in Fayette county what was done by other chapters and states. Sixteen out of 36 chapters in West Virginia raised a total of $29,720; 46 out of 108 chapters in Kentucky, $39,980; 40 out of 82 chapters in Virginia, $32,961. By comparison, the Fayette County Chapter made a splendid record and as the chapter board of directors accepted a quota of but $10,000 it is extremely pleased with the result of $13,618.13. The campaign has been closed and all money forwarded to the National Red Cross.

The committee wishes to thank all those who contributed to the fund, and especially those who gave of their time and effort in order to make it a success. The banks and churches of the county are deserving of special credit, as it was through this source the principal sum was raised

300 PHILADELPHIA SALOON KEEPERS DECIDE TO QUIT

By United Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—Approximately 300 of Philadelphia's 1,300 saloons hauled up the "white flag" today and surrendered to Governor Pinchot in the executive's war to drive saloons from Pennsylvania. Quietly smaller saloons began removing fixtures, changing doors and screens in compliance with notices signed by United States Attorney General Daugherty and State Attorney General Woodruff to go out of business at once. A majority, however, swung open their doors as usual this morning, determined to fight the closing order.

Action against the 1,000 saloons that are defying the ultimatum will be instituted within 36 hours, it was intimated. Governor Pinchot, who is personally directing the "war" is preparing new drives.

"We are not marking time. We are going ahead as fast as a horse can trot," he said. "We mean business."

This statement was taken to mean the saloons in other cities of the State would be served with the closing notices next. It was intimated that Pittsburg, Altoona, Erie and many other towns would be included in the dry crusade.

FIREMEN WILL SOLICIT FUND FOR HALLOWE'EN

The firemen's committee on Hallowe'en, named to solicit funds and issue invitations, will begin its activities at once. It is just three weeks from today that the big event will be staged and with no time to spare the firemen will be busy from now on.

Although too early to hear just what other towns expect to send delegations here, the firemen expect this season's event to the the largest ever held under their auspices. The soliciting committee must be heard from before the prize list can be announced as the amount received is the basis on which prizes are offered.

Stores have already placed their masquerade attire on sale. The conversations in which the coming celebration is mentioned would indicate the immense throng which is anticipating "dressing up" on October 26.

The next meeting of the firemen will be held Thursday, October 18. Before that time invitations will have been sent to all fraternal and other organizations in both this city and surrounding communities to participate and many replies will have been received. The prize list will also be completed that evening.

Chief among the prizes will be those offered to the school section. This feature of the parade is always interesting and the youngsters turn out enmasse to participate. The teachers give the firemen aid in caring for their young proteges.

The committee working on the celebration is composed of Harry Bowers, Jesse A. Cypher and Chief W. E. DeBolt.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK PROGRAM UNDER WAY IN CONNELLSVILLE

National Fire Prevention Week will be observed next week, from October 8 to 13 inclusive. It is a movement that is gaining in importance each year and is backed by insurance companies and safety department heads of cities all over the country.

Just what program will be carried out in Connellsville is being left to W. E. DeBolt, chief of the Fire Department. He said he has not yet definitely decided just what would feature the work but expected to have some sort of campaign that would attract the interest of both old and young.

Last year a fire alarm box was mounted on a fire truck and its operation explained on the streets. It was also taken into the schools and the students shown the method of turning in an alarm. Chief DeBolt said the week's work had resulted in a great cut in the number of false alarms.

Fire Prevention Week has been established to teach people just what fire hazards are and how to remove them. It originated when the loss from fire in the United States became appalling.

Cards advertising the week are placed throughout the city and teachers in the school rooms will urge upon their pupils the importance of preventing fires, whether at home or in the woods.

Chief DeBolt will probably announce tomorrow just what his program for next week in line with the national campaign will include. He expects to enlist the aid of the school authorities as he has always done in the past.

NEGROES DRAW REVOLVERS ON SECTION BOSS

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad police are looking for two negroes who yesterday afternoon pulled guns on Paul DeLeone, a section foreman of the company, following an argument over some laborers. The men escaped on an eastbound freight and no further word of them had been received today.

Some time ago, according to Baltimore Ohio police, a number of negroes were sent in this region to work on another railroad. A few quit and took jobs with the Baltimore & Ohio, under DeLeone. Yesterday two unknown negroes approached the others while they were at work and endeavored to get them to quit.

Foreman DeLeone asked their business and requested that they leave his men alone. An argument ensued and the negroes pulled guns on the foreman. DeLeone notified Captain R. C. Bledsoe of the Baltimore & Ohio police, but the men had made good their getaway.

Guardsmen Plan To Storm Barricade Of Pen Convicts

EDDYVILLE, Ky., Oct. 5—All action in an effort to dislodge three prisoners barricaded in the prison mess hall, here has been postponed until 5:30 P. M., Captain Rutford of Company C, Kentucky National Guard, announced this morning.

Orders were received by Warden John Chilton to delay action until the arrival of the State Board of Charities and Correction late this afternoon.

EDDYVILLE, Ky., Oct. 5.—Another National Guard unit was ordered here today as authorities prepared to storm the state prison mess hall where three convicts are holding a small army at bay. A company of militiamen from May Field is enroute to the prison.

Fifty National Guardsmen and five prison guards armed with hand grenades and tear gas bombs were to rush the convicts' stronghold about noon.

At least one of the three prisoners who killed three guards and wounded another in an attempt to shoot their way to liberty Wednesday is still alive. The last move by the defenders of the mess hall came shortly after dark last night. A bullet was fired from a second window as a prison employe walked into the prison yard to light an acetylene lamp. An hour earlier one of the convicts is believed to have attempted to escape. A fusillade of machine-gun fire drove him back when he started down the stairs. The guards had discerned his shadow through a stairway window.

The attending physician said it would be but a matter of hours. He lapsed into unconsciousness soon after being taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. George Blackstone, at Snydertown.

The stroke is said to have been result of a violent attack of sneezing with which Mr. Sadler was seized after going to the store. A blood vessel in the brain was ruptured.

CONTROVERSY OVER TERMINAL OF SEWER LINE

Forty Citizens of South Connellsville Protest Ending at Park Avenue.

MAY RESORT TO COURT

Three Members of Council Contend They Voted for Extension to McCormick Avenue; Others Assert Terminus Was to Be at Brick Store.

A controversy has arisen at South Connellsville as to how far south the sewer system now under construction is to be extended.

At the regular meeting of council Thursday evening 40 citizens mostly from the south end of the town, near the terminal of the car line appeared to express their stand on the matter. W. R. Hammer, chairman of a committee of 12 recently named to fight for the rights of the south enders, was spokesman.

The contention of the committee was that the vote on the sewer question was for extension of the main to McCormick avenue. The contract, as submitted at the meeting, provides for construction only to Park street or to the Brick Store. Councilmen William Griffiths, Vernon Fisher and M. R. Pollock contended they voted with the understanding that McCormick avenue was to be the terminal. President W. S. Trevitt, S. B. Miller and W. R. Shupe took the stand that Park avenue was to be the end of the work. The one absentee, H. T. Robinson, was said to stand with President Trevitt and his supporters.

"The question now is," said Chairman Hammer; "Was the contract changed after the vote was taken or was Park avenue left out while the clerk was reading the contract?" Citizens at the "end of the line" are up in arms, Mr. Hammer said, and demand a showdown. They are prepared to carry the matter into court, he said.

The work on the sewer main has been halted at Allegheny avenue, P. J. Ridge, the contractor, told council it would be possible to complete it as far as J. J. Evans' store before cold weather. Council will hold a special meeting to determine whether the work shall be continued or whether it shall end for the season where it now is.

Another problem has arisen from the fact that no provision was made in the plans for an outlet from the south end of the main. The citizens contend this is not a fault of theirs and that it is up to council to provide for the outlet.

DELAY IN HEARING HOLDS UP FIGHT AGAINST WALTON

By United Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 5.—Plans for the proposed impeachment proceedings against Governor Walton were delayed today by court action. The hearing on the petition for a restraining order to prevent state troops from interfering with the second contemplated special session of the state legislature was ordered continued by District Judge James I. Phelps.

This, combined with the temporary restraining order secured by the governor prohibiting the state election commissioner from certifying the returns from Tuesday's voting, temporarily halted the preparations of legislators for an extraordinary session.

LESS DIFFERENCE BETWEEN SUMMER AND WINTER "GAS"

WASHINGTON, Oct 5.—Summer gasoline and winter gasoline are becoming more and more alike, states the Department of the Interior as the result of a survey recently made by the Bureau of Mines of the motor fuels sold in various cities of the country. This seasonal variation in the characteristics of summer and winter gasolines, though still present, has nearly reached an apparent state of minimum fluctuation, the bureau found.

The survey just completed is the eighth semi-annual motor gasoline survey made by the Bureau of Mines. Gasolines were tested as found in the markets of ten cities.

The present survey shows an interruption in the apparent tendency toward greater uniformity in the character of gasolines marketed in various sections of the United States, which had been indicated in the surveys made from April 1917, to January, 1923, and which had been arrived at by averaging the end points of the 10 per cent of the least volatile and most volatile samples of gasoline. The difference in average end points, which amounted to 116 degrees in April, 1917, had decreased to 54 degrees in January, 1923 and rose to 71 degrees in the survey just completed.

Comparison of the July, 1922, and July, 1923, surveys show, on the whole, very little difference in the boiling point range of the gasoline sold during July of last year and that sold during July of this year. Comparison of the January, 1923, and July, 1923, surveys brings out distinctly the difference between summer and winter grades of gasoline. The differences indicate a seemingly slight decrease in volatility in the gasoline sold during the present summer.

Of the 153 samples collected, 109 failed to meet the Federal specifications revised October 21 1922. The departure from Federal specifications in the majority of samples analyzed does not, however, exceed a few degrees.

A NEIGHBOR'S VIEWS ON AUTOMOBILE TITLE REGISTRATION.

The opinions and comments of the Latrobe Bulletin upon matters of public interest which are always treated with fairness and clearness of statement by Editor Whitman, are held in high regard by The Courier. Thus when the former differs from the latter, even in minor points in the consideration of topics of current interest, The Courier welcomes the opportunity for its readers to hear the Bulletin's views. At this time the subject is the recently effective law governing the registration of titles for automobiles. Answering the comments of The Courier on this law the Bulletin presents the following:

The Connellsville Courier, in all likelihood, will be accorded a considerable degree of approval upon the part of motorists, respecting its sharp attack upon the new law which requires a certificate of title for every motor vehicle, the same to be issued by the state in return for a fee of two dollars.

The Courier assails the new law as "foolish and unnecessary" legislation, with no "show of reason or justification."

It charges that "the supreme folly and uselessness of this law lies in the fact that it requires what is, in effect, a duplication of records with respect to car ownership. Under present regulations," it points out, "all the information required for registration under the new law already has been given when an application has been made for the annual license. The department has on file the name, residence, and other facts which identify the owner. The new law will provide nothing in addition. There may be some change in the form—and very probably in the direction of greater complexity, not simplicity—but in essence the information will be precisely the same as now furnished."

At first glance, this might seem a just criticism, it being quite likely that most of us would think that the information given us to a motor vehicle when a license is sought for it, would be quite sufficient to identify both the vehicle and the owner.

Moreover, it will be agreed by all who make out the new blanks, that they are more complicated than the old.

Yet, there is to be taken into account the fact that when motor vehicles pass the million mark, in a single state and when the thefts of motor vehicles run into the thousands, every year, something additional to what has prevailed is needed, in an effort to safeguard ownership of motor vehicles. Men who have made a study of the problem say that providing a certificate of title for every motor vehicle, will tend to safeguard ownership much as the recording of a deed safeguards the ownership of a piece of real estate. Whether it will or not, remains to be seen. If it will, it easily will be worth the fee of two dollars exacted.

Moreover, The Courier overlooks one point: The act of registration may be complicated, but it ought to load, eventually, to simplicity, since, when once registered a motor vehicle can be re-licensed, year after year, with much less trouble than heretofore has been the case, inasmuch as it will not even be necessary to make affidavit to the application for a renewal of the license. The law will save the owner of a motor vehicle at least fifty cents a year, which isn't bad interest upon an investment of $2.00 (with a notarial fee in addition), for a certificate of title.

If the new law operates to lessen thievery in motor vehicles, by increasing the hazards of realizing upon the plunder, and in addition saves a notarial fee, each year, those who now believe the new law to be a useless and foolish piece of legislation, may have reason to change their minds about it.

The law still is to be tested, in order to arrive at any conclusion as to whether or not it will justify the claims made by those who advocated it.

The Courier's criticism of the new law was not because it was designed to lessen thievery of automobiles, but solely on the ground that as it will be applied it will be doing practically the same work now done by the highway department in making records of the owners of machines when they apply for license. It is because of this duplication of effort that The Courier regards the law as unnecessary and an additional burden on automobile owners.

Willing as The Courier always is to defer to the larger experience of the editor of the Bulletin on all matters relating to legislation, this paper awaits with no little interest the result of the test to which the law will presently be subjected, and with the hope that it will make automobile theft much the most hazardous of all forms of criminal activity.

Germany's Wealth

Newly arrived from a visit to the occupied territory, Dr. Dwight Hillis, writing in The Forum, is impressed with Germany's resources. He quotes a conversation he had with an official of the Krupp Company. "The French hold the Ruhr valley as a mortgage on our promissory note signed at Versailles," said this official. "But," he added, "remember that no debtor ever lives to have the mortgage foreclosed, especially when his collateral is worth twenty times the amount of his note." Just how conservative is this estimate can be realized by consulting the German official publications as to the coal resources of Europe in 1922, which gives these figures: Germany, 235 million tons; Poland, 208; Great Britain, 189; Russia in Europe, 57, France, 31; Belgium, 11.

So rich are a few coal veins in the Ruhr in by-products yielding dyes and explosives, that the government estimates Germany's coal resources at ten gold marks a ton, or five hundred billions of dollars. This is approximately seven times the total national wealth of Great Britain and Ireland, and nine times the national wealth of France.

PINHOLES DRILLED IN STEEL

Delicate Device Is Used in Manufacturing Adding Machines.

Making an adding machine required the drilling of ten holes in a plate a thirty-second of an inch thick, each hole to be accurate to a thousandth of an inch, yet no bigger than a pin in diameter, says the Washington Star. The result was a most ingenious machine that stands about 12 inches high. The drill which was built carries ten spindles, each holding a drill of number six Morse gauge, which is about the size of the pin of ordinary use.

Each little sliver of steel that does the work is driven by a belt operating through a cam head and therefore works at the same speed as that of its neighbors. The actual drilling requires ten seconds.

THE FRANKENSTEIN By MORRIS

Schools, Ministers and Marriage and Divorce

By JUDGE BEN B. LINDSAY
Judge of the Denver Juvenile Court
(Written for The United Press)

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 5.—The trouble with a good many preachers and so-called reformers is that they do not know society as it is, and naturally they cling to their ideas of society as they think it is or as they would like to have it. In this court, with its confidences, I know a great deal more about members of some congregations of our ministers than the ministers themselves know.

The ostrich-like habit of refusing to know or pretending to know things as they are is one of the causes for conditions as we are beginning to find them in society. The question of WHAT IS is just as important as the questions of what is immoral or moral or what is right or wrong.

If marriage is turning out to be such a failure—whatever may be the cause—it would seem to follow that the natural and instinctive relations of people are to continue to exist in many cases regardless of marriage. A young woman who has lived in such a relation, notwithstanding she has had all of the best in home, school and church, recently said to me: "The great majority of all the girls I know who have been married in the last two years have been separated or have been divorced, with some of the usual scandal and publicity that follows. If Bill and I don't get along together we will just separate without the annoyance of a divorce. What is the use of marrying?"

What of the Result.

I am not saying this attitude is right. I am trying to make clear that it is the attitude of mind that is much more common than it used to be, and I am asking what is going to be the result?

So long as a young woman maintaining such a relation, is subject to the blights of convention if she is found out, I say she is not going to be the mother of children. She is the type that is wise enough never to be embarrassed with motherhood or, if she is, that consults the shady physician whose illegal operations are mounting into the millions annually in this country.

I am asking if this condition is not going to lead, for example, to a standard of recognizing the unmarried mother as entitled to respect if she has a child; such a standard might prevent thousands of child murders! I do not know if such a standard will come about, but I do say that all of those things portend some changes in our standards, so that that which is now concealed—except as known to small groups—may eventually be boldly revealed without the blight of society, and consequently with the acceptance of the course of nature.

Schools and Churches.

Schools, as a rule, do not teach youth about life, the importance of parenthood, and, until very recently, schools did very little to teach the laws of health and that reverence and respect for the physical body and its functions to which it is entitled.

The teaching of too many of the churches is still too much mere cant and platitude. Youth are getting on to that, and consequently they do not take them seriously any longer. The church depends too much upon artificial restraints. They are trying to prepare the path for youth instead of preparing youth for the path.

I am only speaking generally—and not of some magnificent exceptions in both church and school. But the exceptions are too few and the general condition is too general. I have no doubt at all that our conventions, customs and standards right under our noses are undergoing a big change.

When you are married there's one thing to do
If you're a peace-loving man
And a family jar is distressing to you:
Fall in with things she will plan
If she asks in to dinner some folks you detest,
Just smile and be pleasant—You'll find it is best.

If she gets up a family picnic some day,
Which you'd rather she wouldn't, no doubt,
Don't try to persuade her you can't get away,
That good old excuse is worn out;
It is better without any fuss to give in,
Just carry the basket she'll hand you, and grin.

If to dances or operas or lectures on art
She proclaims her intention to go,
Don't argue against it—Get ready to start,
Say "yes," when she's looking for "no."
If you want to keep peace with the wife of your dreams,
Go where'e'er she wills howe'er painful it seems.

For most of us married men, early or late,
From experience learn to submit,
We mutter ourselves when the wife makes a date
And do what we don't like a bit
For the sake of sweet peace we have ceased to protest,
We fall in with her plans for we've found it is best.

School Apparel for Boys and Girls

For genuine pride in sporting some new wearing apparel, the average school boy or girl is not to be denied. They appreciate a good appearance just as much as do the older folks.

It takes good materials and good workmanship to make school wear that will stand the tests of the strenuous noon and recess games. You need not expect more service from a school outfit than has been built into it.

This is why Union Supply Company's clothing and shoe lines for children are so popular. Our lines of clothing, knitwear, underwear, hosiery and school shoes have been carefully selected by experienced buyers, and they are offered as representing the best values to be had in school wear.

See how well a Union Supply Company store can equip your boy or girl for fall and winter.

J. A. STRICKLER DIES SUDDENLY AT WILKINSBURG

Josiah A. Strickler, 83 years old, for 30 years treasurer of the permanent annuity fund of the Pittsburg Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died suddenly Wednesday night at his home, 508 South avenue, Wilkinsburg.

Mr. Strickler had just returned from Kittanning, where he attended a meeting of the board of stewards in connection with the annual meeting of the conference, when he was stricken with a heart attack. He had planned to return to Kittanning yesterday for the completion of the arrangements.

He was for many years engaged in the coal and coke business at Mount Pleasant, moving to Wilkinsburg 32 years ago. He was one of the organizers and for a time was president of the Wilkinsburg Bank. He retired several years ago. He was a member of the South Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Wilkinsburg. He leaves a son, M. Elmer Strickler; a daughter, Mrs. F. M. Storer, and three sisters, Mrs. F. M. Strawn, and Mrs. W. Y. Bygate of Wilkinsburg and Mrs. P. N. Pyatt of Youngwood.

Mr. Strickler married a daughter of the late Peter Freed of Bullskin township. He was an uncle of P. P. Strawn of Cottage avenue, Connellsville. The funeral of a brother, William Henry Strickler, was held a week ago today.

The body will be brought to Mount Pleasant Saturday afternoon for burial in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The funeral party is expected to arrive at 3 o'clock.

Two Drunks Fined.

Two drunks were arrested last night. One left a $15 forfeit and the other paid a $10 fine this morning in police court.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

The Family Friend.

One Mother Says.

A doctor once told me he had so much trouble in winning children over and getting them to describe to him truely just how they felt, because they had been taught to look upon him as very important and a great personage, or had been threatened with the doctor when they would not take medicine. I have, therefore, taught my children to look upon the family physician as their dear, good friend. I take them up to his office sometimes to be weighed, and their association with him has made them ready to trust him when they are really sick.

MEYERSDALE, Oct. 5.—Word was received here Thursday of the death of Charles Hartley, which occurred at his home at DeLand, Fla. Mr. Hartley, with his wife and child, spent the summer with relatives here and at Cumberland, leaving for their southern home only two weeks ago. Mr. Hartley had been in poor health for some time but his condition was not thought serious. His remains will be brought here for burial. They are expected to arrive Saturday. Besides his wife and child he is survived by his mother, Mrs. S. C. Hartley; one sister, Mrs. J. J. Hoblitzell, and two brothers, Earl and Roy Hartley, all of Meyersdale.

I. C. C. Reopens Hard Coal Rate Hearing

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Announcement was made today by the Interstate Commerce Commission that "for good cause appearing" the commission's investigation of rates and charges governing the transportation of anthracite had been re-opened.

The commission held one hearing on the subject, attended by only three anthracite carrying railroads. The failure of other roads to attend automatically closed the investigation. No time or place for the new hearings was announced.

ABUNDANT WHEAT SUPPLY MAKES BREAD ECONOMICAL FOOD

Margarine an Excellent Spread for Bread

The housewife who is a wise provider will see to it that her family has plenty of bread. Nutrition experts tell us that from one-fifth to one-third of the calories should be supplied by cereal foods. Three-quarters of the cereal consumption of this country is in the form of wheat bread.

Just at present there is an abundant supply of wheat, and bread is cheap. An increase in its use would result in a large saving to the American family and at the same time provide a simple but excellent diet.

The selection of a suitable spread for bread needs consideration. For to the American taste something is needed with which to spread the bread and make it more palatable. From a dietetic standpoint, also, bread is not in itself a balanced ration but needs a complement in the form of a nutritious spread composed of an edible fat.

For this purpose margarine is being called to the attention of and used by the American housewife. She wants wheat flour to be white, palatable and nutritious; and she wants the spread to be pure, wholesome and delicious. Jelke GOOD LUCK Margarine answers this requirement perfectly.

Jelke GOOD LUCK Margarine is prepared from pure ingredients. Wholesome food oils rendered from meat fats are blended into a perfect emulsion with milk that is received fresh and sweet each morning from our farms. Both the ingredients and the method of preparation are delightfully pure and sanitary. During the entire process of production Jelke GOOD LUCK Margarine never comes in contact with human hands.

Bread spread with Jelke GOOD LUCK Margarine forms a combination that is delicious and nourishing. Whenever the one is used the other should also be in evidence.—Advertisement.

Harvey and Child Resign Their Posts

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—President Coolidge today is giving serious attention to the question of successors to Colonel George Harvey, American ambassador to the Court of St. James, and Richard Washburn Child, ambassador to Rome, who have resigned.

The President may have decided in his own mind to whom he will offer the posts but if he has there has been no indication of his choice. Mr. Coolidge may fill the ambassadorships soon after Harvey and Child have arrived in the United States, but on the other hand State Department officials pointed out there is no necessity for immediate action. Therefore, the London and Rome embassies may be left in the hands of charges for some months.

Hand Knit Frocks Are Chic for Sports Wear

Hand-knit sports frocks for madame and mademoiselle are among the smart knitted garments worn by women who dress well. But if a woman can wield a knitting needle, she can have the same frock at much less cost.

Some of the frocks are made in one piece, with low V-neck and plain stocking stitch for three-quarters of the way, and in squares or plaids, as you will, of the knit and purl combination. The skirt ends with a plain hem effect in the stocking stitch. Others are two-piece. Yellow, tan, beige, powder blue, green and white, in one tone or with another color combined, are used for these frocks.

The softest yarns should be used. Some of the frocks are embroidered in Angora or brush wool, and still others are trimmed with worsted yarn flowers or conventional designs which are appliqued on.

Dainty Ribbon Rose Bag Is Easy to Make

Every woman wants a dainty and distinctive bag to carry with her pretty frocks. Here is one of the daintiest and easiest that can be made. For the foundation cut two circles of buckram and cover with silk of the same color as the ribbon you intend using. Use four or six yards of ribbon according to the size of bag desired. Tuck the end of the ribbon to the center of the circle, then twist it and swirl it around in circles until the entire foundation is covered. Pins will have to be used to hold the ribbon in place until the foundation is covered; then the ribbon is tacked and the pins removed. When the two circles have been thus covered they are joined together with the same ribbon. This makes a rose bag similar to a double cockade, and should be swung over the arm.

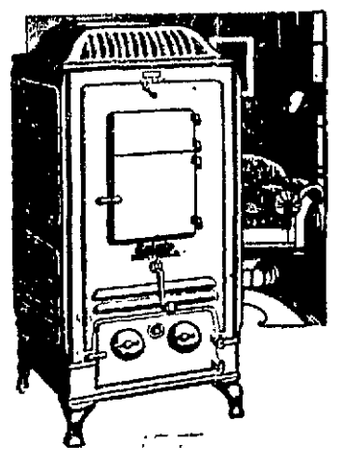
Estate HEATROLA

NOW PRICED AT $147



Heat your home the Heatrola way. It is the new day way of heating for small homes—with or WITHOUT BASEMENTS. Installed in one of the living rooms, it supplies moist warm air to all connecting rooms—up stairs and down.

Results are amazing. The owner (or renter) of a small house is offered the advantages of warm air heating at low cost.

Estate Heatrola burns any kind of coal—hard or soft, lignite or slack. Wood can also be used with highly satisfactory results.

The beautiful mahogany finish of the Heatrola is a vitreous enamel—hard and as smooth as glass, and practically everlasting. It is grained to look like rare old mahogany. You can rub it or dust it with a cloth, just as you do your furniture. No cast-iron parts to black; no nickel to polish.

BRIGHTENS THE CORNERS — Sun-Glow — CHASES THE CHILLS

Radiant Heaters

Designed with a view to beautify the fireplace or any other part of the room where it may be placed. All models are equipped with a solid cast top, something entirely different in a heater of this type. Actually an ornament to the room, possessing exclusive features found in no other heater of the radiant type.

When you buy a gas heater, either as a separate room heater or as an auxiliary to the furnace, you naturally do not want just a common awkward looking gas stove when it is possible to have a heater that combines neatness and beauty of design, amazing instant heat, together with economy and efficiency of operation, and best of all, at a price within the reach of everyone. All these features are embodied in the building of SUN-GLOW Radiant Heaters.

When you install a Sun-Glow you put sunshine into the home because the Sun-Glow radiates the same cheerfulness, coziness and solid comfort as does the sun. They are priced as low as $15.

Easy to Keep Lingerie Fresh and Delightful

Daintiness is important in most branches of dress, but absolutely essential in lingerie, says the Lady's Companion. Modern taste has discarded masses of ribbon, lace, brilliant colors and eccentricity of any kind in underwear, so it is really an easy matter to keep it fresh and delightful to look upon. White Jap silk or delicate white washing crepes and nainsooks are the favored materials, well cut and perfectly finished off with a little handwork. Favorite forms of decoration are deep hems of net, scallops faggoting, slotting and inset motifs.

Beading is used to replace seams and hems whenever possible, and even shoulder straps are of self material, with a touch of veining or what-not—a far more practical notion for washing garments than expensive ribbons. A few delicate colors, such as primrose, cyclamen, wisteria, shell, peach and apricot are not frowned upon for underwear—especially trousseau underwear—but the girl who is rather hard up will find white the best choice, six times out of seven.

A charming notion for keeping lingerie beautiful "in repose," as well as in use, adorned a recent trousseau and might be adopted by every girl who loves "pretties," as it costs practically nothing. The notion consisted in keeping each separate "set" together with a broad band of frilled ribbon garter elastic, fastened with a press stud, the joint being hidden by a satin sachet in the shape of a rose.

The color of the bands was lilac (the bride's favorite), but it might be varied for different sets, especially if some were tinted and others white. The bands keep the sets compact and show the wearer at a glance which she wants. Such delicious bundles should, of course, be kept in a drawer lined with soft tissue or a piece of flowered voile, wide enough to fold over the garments and hold in the fragrance of the sachets.

Colored Ribbon Used for Curtain Tie-Backs

Plain white curtains may be made infinitely more attractive by the use of colored ribbon tie-backs instead of the usual conventional white. To make them, use three-quarters of a yard of heavy satin ribbon, one and three-quarters of an inch wide for the band to go around the curtain. Trim both edges of this with contrasting colored ribbon one-quarter of an inch wide shirred on in a zig-zag manner. Where the band is sewed together place a ribbon wheel made in the following way: Cover a piece of buckram cut in a circle three inches in diameter with tiny rosettes made of the same ribbon which edges the band. Around the circumference sew a plaited frill of the same ribbon used in making the band. You will need two yards for this frill and five yards of the narrow ribbon will be necessary for trimming both band and wheel.

It is possible to achieve many lovely color harmonies by the use of these ribbon tie-backs, and leading interior decorators are using them extensively in their new designs. Recently a well-known New York decorator placed yellow and jade tie-backs made in the above manner on curtains of violet taffeta. These beautiful curtains were hung in a dining room the walls of which were paneled in gray-green.

Women to attract must

Radiate Health!

BEAUTY is the magnet which draws all eyes—and back of beauty—Health—working silently.—Red blood tingling through the veins; —the glow of youth in the cheeks;—the spring of eagerness, of vim, of vitality in the walk;—the ever graceful air, unrestrained by care or worry. —All the charms of beauty.—All the works of health.

Men are fascinated by the charms of beauty. Women gaze with envy, secretly jealous, perhaps—wondering —hoping—praying for that attractiveness that is not theirs.

But why the wondering—the hoping—the praying for that craved-for attractiveness—that beauty. Good looks is the barometer of one's condition. Good health radiates beauty. S. S. S. purifies the blood—creates new red blood cells—rids the system of impurities which make beauty and attractiveness impossible. As women to attract must radiate health so must they keep their systems free from impurities and their red blood cells ever increasing. S. S. S. does both.

S. S. S., since 1826, has been ridding the system of impurities—pimples, blackheads, boils, eczema and rheumatism—building red blood cells —aiding women to be attractive by radiating health. S. S. S. is made of carefully selected herbs and barks, scientifically prepared and proportioned. All good drug stores carry S. S. S. It is more economical to purchase the large size bottle.

Americans In Quake Zone Who Survived Japanese Disaster Will Be Assisted By Funds Raised In Red Cross Drive

Among the hundreds of thousands of homeless, hungry refugees in Japan's earthquake area there are many foreigners and among them numerous Americans. Perhaps no group was better represented in the stricken districts than the American Missionary, some of whom are shown in the above photograph conducting a Bible meeting in one of the streets of Tokio.

It is for the immediate relief of the suffering that the American Red Cross, which was designated by President Coolidge as the channel through which sympathetic Americans might contribute to them, has issued, a call to the people of the United States, urging them not to relax in their efforts. The original minimum quota of $5,000,000 set by the Red Cross when the first cable dispatches were received from Japan was found early in the campaign, or as soon as more complete details were received, to be inadequate for the tremendous task of relief, and John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, and Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who is associated with him on the executive committee of the organization, have declared that the intense suffering and distress of the affected people justifies redoubled efforts to rush relief to them.

In an official statement issued by them they emphasize the fact that while property losses might have been somewhat exaggerated in the earlier reports there could be no question that the human suffering is most intense, with the many thousands of injured and sick, the great number of orphans and a population almost entirely without shelter. President Coolidge announced after advices he received from his representatives in Japan, that he believed there was a necessity for continued effort to increase America's contributions.

Because of America's prompt response in other great disasters, this country was the first toward which Japan looked for help. Red Cross officials have implicit faith that her appeal will meet with the same generous sympathy that was displayed in feeding the victims of the great Russian famine.

Emphasis has been placed by Chairman Payne on the fact that every cent of the money collected for Japanese relief will be spent for just that purpose. None of it will be diverted to the Red Cross funds for other uses, and there will be none of the usual expense involved in sending personnel to the stricken area. The fund will be administered by a volunteer committee of substantial business men.

Dainty Frock for Flappers to Wear

Satin Outfit With Accordion Plaiting and Applique Rosettes.

The black satin frock belongs exclusively to the flapper, asserts a fashion writer in the Washington Star. It has saucy little plaited frills suggesting sleeves, and a diminutive yoke dotted with countless tiny ribbon rosebuds. At one side the yoke effect is carried out by a panel of the same width of satin, also trimmed with applique rosettes, which extends the length of the gown, touching its hem. A border of narrow white lace gives an additional touch of piquancy to this panel, and is effectively contrasted against the somber black background. The frock itself is of black satin, accordion-plaited, with a long-bloused bodice and an equally long skirt. A wide sash of unplaited satin passes through a narrow opening in the side panel and ties in a fluffy bow at the opposite hip. The ends are daintily frilled with lace to correspond with that on the rosebud-dotted side piece.

Youthful Frock of Black Satin, Accordion Plaited.

The latest flapper fancy in millinery is the "Valentino" hat. One can picture every other small miss on the street wearing a small mannish South American chapeau, with strings tied saucily under her chin! The modistes should really revive the velvet bolero to go with it, and perhaps they will—one never can tell To return to the "Valentino"—the establishment introducing it fashions the chapeau of stiff black felt. The flat crown is circled by one plain band of grosgrain ribbon, also in black, and the short ends dangle just an inch or so over the edge of the brim. Longer streamers of black grosgrain are fastened at each side of the brim, to tie in a loose knot below the chin of the wearer.

NEW STEEL PLANE FINISHED

Two Engines and Double Propellers Permit Repairs in Air.

A giant new all-steel airplane, constructed by Messrs. Boulton and Paul, Norwich, is the biggest all-steel airplane yet built, and has many new features.

The machine has two independent power plants, each of which is centrally situated in an engine room, and is under the control of an engineer.

The water and petrol systems are duplicated and arrangements have been made and a sufficiency of power supplied for the machine to fly on either engine.

The front engine drives a pair of two-blade propellers, and the rear engine a smaller pair located behind the former. All such minor repairs as are normally the cause of engine breakdown can be dealt with in the air.

Another innovation is an engine silencer, and a feature is that the only wood in the machine is that used in the propeller and tractors. The machine has a span of 70 feet and weighs five and one-half tons. The engines are two Napiers of 450 horsepower each.—London Tit-Bits.

MORE WHEAT IN THE WORLD

Estimates for 1923 Show 116,796,000 Bushels More Than 1922.

The 1923 wheat crop of countries north of the equator, which produce about four-fifths of the world supply, was estimated by the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, at 2,683,306,000 bushels, compared with 2,566,510,000 in 1922, and 2,477,698,000 in 1921.

Production in Europe outside of Russia and Germany was given as 1,001,187,000 bushels, compared with 880,216,000 last year, and 970,979,000 in 1921.

The estimate of the French crop included in these figures and cabled to the department by the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, is 290,456,000 bushels, compared with 248,315,000 last year. Rye production in France was estimated at 93,927,000 bushels, compared with 88,412,000 last year.

Method in His Folly.

A staid business man suddenly began reading Mother Goose's rhymes.

In his library at night he would go over these old rhymes, seeming to weigh one as against another, then shaking his head, and turning to other parts of the book. Naturally his family became alarmed and sent for the family doctor.

The medical man had to go about broaching the subject with fine diplomacy, of course, but it had to be done and he did it. He explained to the business man that the latter's wife was becoming uneasy.

"Great snakes!" exclaimed the merchant, when he had grasped the idea. "What does a woman know about business? I'm just trying to find a good name for a new style in children's rompers."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Four Rivers Run Parallel.

Kingdom Ward, who has returned from Burma after eleven months spent in the Tibetan-Yunnan marshes, made a complete traverse, east to west, of that extraordinary belt of the earth's crust through which the waters of the Tibetan plateau escape. Here four of the greatest rivers of Asia flow in a strip of mountainous country not more than 75 miles wide. There is nothing elsewhere on the earth's surface to compare with these mighty rivers—the Yangtse, Mekong, Salween and Irrawad—running parallel to each other for a hundred miles and separated only by rock partitions which in places attain altitudes of 25,000 feet.—London Times.

ALTITUDE IS MEASURED BY BOILING OF WATER

Tests Show That Surveying Method Is Less Acurate Than the Hypsometer.

The most accurate way of measuring the height of a mountain is the boiling-water test. Although the modern barometers and surveying instruments used for making such observations are wonderful, they cannot rival the boiling test. Many mountain measurements made with surveying instruments have been corrected when water was boiled and observed on the summits.

No one yet knows the height of Mount Everest, the highest mountain in the world. Its altitude has been measured perhaps a score of times, but no two of those observations come out the same. The various calculations have therefore been added together and averaged, giving the familiar figures 29,002 feet. The world will not know the real height until someone succeeds in climbing to its summit and boiling water there.

A special instrument, called the hypsometer, has been invented for making these tests. It is compact and easily carried on mountain-climbing expeditions. The only thing breakable about the device is the thermometer used for testing the water. The hypsometer is so contrived that it can be used in the snow or when high winds are blowing and still give accurate results.

At sea level water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. As the altitude increases the boiling point drops. On very high mountains water boils at temperatures so low that it is impossible to prepare a hot drink, and locomotives have difficulty in getting sufficient steam pressure. The mountain climbers who succeeded in reaching the highest altitude ever attained on Mount Everest found that even when water came to a boil in those high regions it was still possible for them to plunge their hands in it without scalding them.

The boiling test is very accurate. The mountain climber may find himself in peril among the eternal snows, but the hypsometer is never disturbed and its readings are correct to the fraction of a foot. The hypsometer has greatly simplified the work of the mountain climber. A barometer, to be exact, must be very delicately made and of considerable size. It is obviously difficult to carry a long glass tube up a steep, rocky mountainside without accident. The barometer varies if the mercury is not properly refined or if the vacuum of the tube is not quite perfect. The boiling-water test settles any question of altitude.

GIVES MEANING OF OZARK

Veteran Editor Declares That Word Came From "Aux Arc."

The word Ozark, the origin of which has always been more or less of a mystery, comes from the French word, "aux arc," meaning "the place of the hills," according to Charles E. Reid, veteran editor of the Ozark (Mo.) Democrat. Mr. Reid has searched for other explanations of the origin of the word, but could find none.

A Frenchman who had lived in the region suggested that it was a corruption of the French phrase named, probably applied by the French-Canadians and Anglicized later by English settlers.

Either Way.

"Miss Somervain, will you be mine?" "Never."

The young man was disappointed, but not wholly discouraged.

"Well, will you let me be yours?" he asked.—London Tit-Bits.

Both Furnace and Foundry Shade Off Another 25 Cents To $4 Former, $5.25 Latter

Impression Is That Production Has Not Been Curtailed Sufficiently.

MAY BE FURTHER DECLINE

In Price If Output Is Not More Closely Adjusted to Demand; Principal Operators Resisting Lower Prices; Half Nearby Furnaces Out of Blast.

Special to The Weekly Courier.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 3.—Spot coke prices have declined 25 cents more in the past week. This applies equally to furnace coke and to foundry coke, the spot market being now $4.00 on furnace and $5.25 to $5.75 on foundry coke.

Production of coke it appears has not been regulated closely enough to demand. There is some question whether production is in harmony with actual consumption. In some quarters it is held that there is less demand than would fit with production through some consumers having extra coke to work off purchased during the anthracite scare of last August. This feeling, however, is not at all general, the common view being that there is too much production for the consumption. If it were simply a case of working off stock, the market could react to a more reasonable price level without there being any decrease in production, but the view in most quarters in the trade is that if there is to be a favorable readjustment in market prices, it can come only through ovens being blown out.

There has been various sales of standard furnace coke in the past week at $4.00. These sales have not aggregated any large volume and they have not absorbed all the coke available as there are still offerings at this figure. Some observers suggest that if a better balance is not brought about between production and consumption even $4.00 may be shaded in a week or two.

The usual difference in attitude has developed between coke producers. Some are disposed to blow out ovens, even all their ovens, if they cannot secure $5.00 or close to that figure as an average for the remainder of the year. Others are anxious to run no matter what the price. They take the position simply that some coke has to be made and they wish to make that coke themselves. On this theory one or two operators might go as low as $4.25 for the balance of the year while quotations show that it would be easy to buy for the balance of this month at $4.25.

There is no question but that $4.25, not to speak of $4.00, is well below the cost of production with the present very high wage scale. The only question is which would involve the greater loss, more production or idleness. It is improbable that many plants will run at low rates. Either they will close entirely or they will run at as low capacity as can be contrived even by cutting prices.

Foundry coke has slid off 25 cents in the week. There is very good standard foundry coke to be secured at $5.25, and better coke at $5.50, while a few of the choice brands are held at $5.75, and this is not a mere asking price as there are some transactions at $5.75.

There is 72-hour coke, not hand drawn and selected, at $5.00 but this is not standard. Demand has been decidedly light. Foundry operations have evidently been decreasing. The market is now quotable as follows.

Spot furnace	$4.00
Contract furnace	$4.25
Spot foundry	$5.25@$5.75

Average prices of spot coke have been as follows this year:

	For.	Prev.
January	$8.30	$9.25
February	7.30	8.80
March	7.22	8.60
April	6.25	7.80
May	5.25	6.70
June	5.60	5.85
July	4.60	5.30
August	4.65	5.35
September	4.00	5.00

No. 3 Shenango furnace, now producing basic iron, will go out some time this month, while No. 1, which is on Bessemer iron, will continue operating indefinitely. Fully half the merchant furnaces tributary to the Connellsville region are already out, so that there is no room for any great further decrease in coke consumption while there are possibilities of better outlets than hitherto for the product of the region in the heating direction, as while the anthracite scale is settled most of the consumers of anthracite would like to break loose from it.

Pig iron continues quiet, and shows only enough activity to disclose the fact that prices have receded from the level quoted for a couple of months or more. On a sale of 1,000 tons, basic iron became definitely quotable at $1.00 under the former nominal quotation while on a 2,000 ton foundry iron has shown it is at least 50 cents lower.

Bessemer declined $1.00 in sympathy with basic iron. The market is now quotable as follows.

Bessemer	$25.50
Basic	$21.00
Foundry	$24.50@$25.00
Malleable	$24.50@$25.00

These prices are f. o. b. Valley furnaces, rate to Pittsburg being $1.76.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts.

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.—Advertisement.

Passengers and Dollars by Billions In Electric Roads

Wages $4,336,000,000, with 300,000 workers annually.

Fifteen billion passengers last year.

An investment of more than $5,000,000,000.

There, in a nutshell is the electric railway business of the United States, according to the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee.

With all that gigantic business, however, involving billions of car riders and billions of dollars, the burden upon each passenger has been comparatively easy for the average rate of fare has not gone climbing with the same speed as other necessities.

Wages and materials within the electric railway business itself have soared more rapidly than have car fares, as the following table will show.

Wages	Normal	Up 115 per cent
Materials	Normal	Up 89 per cent
Average Fare in U.S.	1.81 cents	Up 42 per cent

Furthermore, the period of fare increase really extended only from 1918. Fare raises did not start until labor, materials and general living costs had been shooting upward for four years.

The world has moved since the days when weary horses or mules dragged the car along, when passengers tried to keep warm by putting their feet in straw strewn on the car floor and no one tried to read by the dim light of an oil lamp. The cost of such vehicular equipment, including the horse, was $1,200.

Today the modern electric car costs from $12,000 to $15,000 and the cars are heated and lighted by electricity. People have no difficulty now in reading their newspapers at night as they ride home from shopping or work, and the newsboys sell most of their papers at the trolley junctions.

Women Should Act Quickly.

When a woman finds herself afflicted with backache, headaches, nervousness, dragging-down pains, pain in her side, irregularities and irritability, dark circles appear under the eyes and her complexion gets sallow, she may be sure the underlying cause is some ailment peculiar to her sex. Such women should act quickly and take the great American remedy for such conditions, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they may be saved years of suffering. For generations this old-fashioned root and herb medicine has been restoring ailing women to health, and it may be relied upon with perfect confidence.—Advertisement.

STEEL WORKERS ARE BEING ORGANIZED INTO SOCCER TEAMS

With the Consent and Encouragement of Employers and Plant Officials.

MEETS NEED FOR SPORTS

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Organizers are again at work among the employes of steel mills at Gary, Ind., strategical point in the steel strike of 1919, which was in part a protest against the 12-hour working day. The new organizers, who come as a direct result of the recent inauguration of the eight-hour day, are not fought but welcomed and encouraged by the steel company.

The new movement is not to organize unions, but soccer teams. With the coming of the eight-hour day, thousands of men now have four hours a day for recreation, but many don't know what to do with it. The welfare departments of the steel companies have volunteered to help them find something to do.

Peter J. Peel, president of the United States Football Association, which controls soccer in the United States, told a representative of The Christian Science Monitor that organizers from Chicago are having great success in bringing the mill hands for soccer. He said:

"Most of the workers in Gary are foreigners. In the European countries the one universal game is soccer. Everybody can play it and everybody does. The game has reached its greatest development in Czechoslovakia, and there are thousands of immigrants from that country in Gary.

"When they worked 12 hours a day they had neither the time, the inclination nor the energy to play at anything. Now that they have four more free hours a day, the most natural thing in the world for them to do is to revive their interest in soccer. All they need is help in organization, initiative to form groups and promote games. Our efforts are receiving splendid encouragement from the authorities in Gary.

"As a result the game of soccer is taking a great boom in the vicinity of northern Indiana than in any other section of the United States at the present time.

"Employers are discovering that devotion to athletics is the finest thing in the world to develop efficient, happy workers. To play a good game of soccer at least once a week a man must take care of himself. He must get a little practice every day and he has no time for dissipation.

"When a man gets interested in soccer, he becomes a better workman, and he is proud of that. He plays a good game of soccer, wins applause, and is proud of that. He becomes a self-respecting citizen."

Mr. Peel says the chief mission of sports is to give the bricklayer, the factory hand, the street car conductor—everybody—a chance to play. Soccer is pre-eminently the universal sport, he believes, because it requires less equipment and the least expensive form of organization.

Coal Commission Was Against Wage Increase

A Washington dispatch says that criticism is expressed against the Coal Commission for failure to take a more definite position as to whether present wages of coal miners are too high or too low. It is known that members of the commission were opposed to any general increase in wages of anthracite miners. They made no definite statement to this effect, however, and a 10 per cent increase was finally sanctioned by Governor Pinchot.

It is understood that when the reports of the Coal Commission are finally placed in form for submission to Congress a special report made by the commission to President Coolidge during the recent anthracite controversy will be included. This report has never been made public. It is understood that the commission went on record in the report against an increase in wages for the anthracite miners.

The fact that the commission did not make a public announcement to this effect, and that its private report was suppressed, may cause some people to give more credence to the charges made last summer as to the July 1 report on anthracite being revised by a cabinet officer, for political reasons, before it was published.

Seventeen Billions In Public Utilities

Seventeen billion one hundred million dollars is now invested in the public utility business in the United States, according to the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee. The money is divided among the utilities as follows:

$5,000,000,000 in the electric railway industry.

$5,500,000,000 in the electric light and power industry.

$1,000,000,000 in the gas industry.

$2,000,000,000 in the telephone and telegraph companies.

Manufacturers of the United States have an aggregate capital of $3,000,000,000 invested in iron and steel works, rolling mills and blast furnaces and the automobile industry now has an investment of approximately $2,000,000,000.

Only 18 Arcolas are allotted to Connellsville

BECAUSE of the shortage of heating equipment, we have had to allot the available supply of ARCOLA outfits to cities and towns in proportion to their population. (An outfit consists of one ARCOLA and an American Radiator for each room.)

While they last, these outfits will be sold at these low prices, $180 to $550, completely installed, depending on the size and number of rooms in your home.

Think of the comfort of radiator warmth in every room for only a few hundred dollars! The few ARCOLA outfits allotted here for ARCOLA WEEK (next week) will go very quickly. Don't shiver through another winter. See your Heating Contractor and ask him for an estimate today.

Look for this sign in your dealer's window. If your house is not warmed with radiators, ARCOLA will save ⅓ of your coal bill and pay for itself in from three to five years. It warms the room in which it stands and sends its healthful hot-water warmth through small pipes to an American Radiator in every other room.

ANTHRACITE MINER CERTIFICATE LAW CREATES MONOPOLY

Bars All Workers Except Those Who Have Lived in State For Two Years.

MINERS USE IT AS A CLUB

The compromise settlement of the anthracite situation brought about by Governor Pinchot was settled, not on the basis of principle but on the basis of expediency, which in this case we think was exceedingly unfortunate, says the Manufacturers Record.

Necessarily it will add largely to the cost of anthracite coal to consumers and the result is simply another yielding to the power of the big stick which the United Mine Workers have been holding over the head of the American people. If Governor Pinchot would settle the anthracite situation in the way in which it ought to be settled, he would bring about the repeal of that unwise measure put through the Legislature of Pennsylvania by the power of the union miners, which prevents a man from working in an anthracite coal mine in Pennsylvania unless he has lived in that state not less than two years and is able to produce satisfactory evidence of having not less than two years practical experience as a miner or mine laborer in the mines of that commonwealth. This gives a monopoly of coal mining in Pennsylvania to the miners now in the state.

In 1889 a law was passed which embodied the following:

"All persons applying for a certificate of competency, or to entitle them to be employed as miners, must produce satisfactory evidence of having had not less than two years' practical experience as a miner, or as a mine laborer in the mines of this Commonwealth, and in no case shall an applicant be deemed competent unless he appear in person before the said board and answer intelligently and correctly at least twelve questions in the English language pertaining to the requirements of a practical miner, and be properly identified, under oath, as a mine laborer by at least one practical miner holding miners' certificates. The said board shall keep an accurate record of the proceedings of all its meetings, and in said record shall show a correct detailed account of the examination of each applicant, with the questions asked and their answers, and at each of its meetings the board shall keep said record open for public inspection. Any miner's certificate granted under the provisions of this act, and the hereinafter mentioned not approved the ninth day of May, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, shall not be transferable to any person or persons whatsoever, and any transfer of the same shall be deemed a violation of this act. Certificates shall be issued only at meetings of said board and said certificates shall not be legal unless then and there signed in person by at least three members of said board."

This law shuts out from the anthracite mines of Pennsylvania, miners from other states. It makes it impossible for any man to work in a Pennsylvania anthracite coal mine until he has lived in the state at least two years and has had practical experience as a miner. A more monopolistic law was probably never passed. So long as that law stands on the books of the Pennsylvania legislation, there can be only turmoil and continued trouble, for the miners knowing that they have an absolute monopoly over the industry will always be in a position, until this law is changed, to use their club on the heads, not only of the people of Pennsylvania but of the people of the entire country, who depend upon anthracite coal. The country should try to save itself by doing away, as largely as may be possible, with the use of anthracite coal until this law is repealed.

Big Tonnage Lost In Mining Coal

Losses in mining bituminous coal in the ten eastern, southern and middle western states average nearly 35 per cent of the total production, according to a report by the Coal Commission.

Improper mining methods and faulty engineering methods were discussed by the commission as producing wastage in the coal mining industry, but it was pointed out that while much of the loss was avoidable through the correction of these methods, at the same time strikes were responsible for considerable of the wastage because of the deterioration of the mines from cessation of operations.

In its study of losses the commission utilized the year 1921 when the total production of the ten eastern states was 368,527,000 tons. In the same year the total loss of coal, the commission estimated, was 196,168,000 tons, of which 109,605,000 tons were considered as avoidable loss and 86,563,000 as unavoidable loss.

The percentage of coal lost, the commission stated, ranges from 20 per cent in the state of Virginia to 49 per cent in the state of Illinois; the average for the ten states being 34.7 per cent and the avoidable loss ranges from 5 per cent in Virginia to 39.7 per cent in Illinois, the average avoidable loss for the ten states being 19.4 per cent and the unavoidable loss averages 15.3 per cent.

In the production of 368,527,000 tons there were left in the mines or lost to future recovery 196,168,000 tons, of which 109,605,000 tons were avoidable — a tonnage equivalent to the production in 1921 of the states of Illinois, Alabama, Indiana and Virginia.

How to tell for sure —what oil your car needs

No. 8 in the series

Perhaps you own a Dodge

If you don't own a Dodge, cut this out and hand it to a friend who does

Your Dodge engine is of the four-cylinder, vertical, L-head type, bore 3⅞", stroke 4½". It is equipped with a splash circulating system of lubrication employing a vane pump located above the oil level.

Oil distribution is effected by dippers on the lower ends of the connecting rods. These dip into the oil in the splash troughs and project it to all friction surfaces within the engine. Small holes above the dippers are provided to convey the oil into the crank pin bearings.

On all Dodge engines, prior to 1923, cast iron pistons were used. Because of the present day fuels, comparatively small carbon deposits in these engines quickly result in "pinging" or knocking.

It is of utmost importance, therefore, that a clean burning oil be used in these engines, under all operating conditions in order to eliminate the tendency toward excessive carbon accumulations. Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic meets these requirements as this oil is of sufficient body to assure thorough engine lubrication and is of such character as to burn with a minimum of carbon deposits.

The 1923 Dodge engine uses a special type of constant clearance, aluminum alloy piston. The chief factor for consideration from a lubrication standpoint is, that they result in much lower piston head temperatures, thus minimizing carbon formations and in turn, the knocking or "pinging" tendency of an engine.

For this reason, Gargoyle Mobiloil "A" of a richer lubricating character than Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic, can be used in these engines to advantage during summer. This change in piston design counteracts the conditions which in the previous models made the engine sensitive to carbon formation.

During summer Gargoyle Mobiloil "A" should be used in the 1923 models; in all earlier models Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic should be used.

During winter, because of the elevated exposed location of the oil pump, it is necessary to use an oil of the proper fluidity, to provide positive pump priming. Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic should be used during winter in all models.

next tuesday, we will tell you about the Correct Lubrication of another car. It may be yours. Watch for it.

Mining Will Be More Prosperous

Mining men in attendance at the annual convention of the American Mining Congress held at Milwaukee last week declared that the settlement of the anthracite coal strike has eliminated about the last cloud on the horizon and has opened the way for a very prosperous year in the entire coal mining industry. The industrial demand for bituminous coal is large and with the coming of cold weather, the domestic demand for both bituminous and anthracite is steadily increasing. These conditions, they say, is bound to have their effects on the price levels.

Comparative figures taken from the United States government report indicate a general improvement in the coal industry. The production of bituminous coal for the calendar year 1923 up to the present time is 367,036,000 tons, as compared to a production in the calendar year 1922, of the same length, of only 233,559,000 tons. In other words, the production of bituminous coal, due to improved industrial and manufacturing conditions, is running over 100,000,000 tons larger than a year ago.

Mining men say there has been a noticeable increase in the purchase of mine equipment and mine machinery during the past year. There has also been a steady increase in utilization of different types of mine locomotives, particularly in the mining industry, and electrical equipment is also making progress in all mining enterprises.

They also indicated that the recognition of Mexico by the United States will have an important effect upon mining enterprises and upon concerns interested in mine equipment and mine machinery in the United States.

It is well known among informed circles, they say, that a large number of extremely representative mining companies in the United States have been ready to develop large enterprises in Mexico, immediately following the recognition of the Obregon government. This not only means stimulation of interest in mining and a larger production, but it will increase the amount of American mine equipment and mine machinery which will be purchased for these new enterprises.

FEWER CROSSING CASUALTIES ON B. & O. SYSTEM

Compared With Last Year the Reduction Has Been 4.3 Per Cent.

Special to The Courier.

BALTIMORE Oct. 5—Highway crossing casualties on the Baltimore & Ohio System for the months of June, July and August this year, as compared with the same months in 1922, dropped 4.3 per cent.

Comparing the three summer months just passed with those of 1921, there was a reduction of 25 per cent in the number of persons killed and injured.

These figures, just announced by the Safety Department of the Baltimore & Ohio indicate conclusively that the Careful Crossing Campaign, which was in progress the past summer and the summer of 1922, was fruitful despite the fact that there was an increase of about 27 per cent in the number of licensed automobiles in 1923 over 1922.

There are 5,150 cross ings at grade on this railroad system and it operates through states showing an automobile registration of 6,200,500. While the former figure is gradually decreasing, the latter is growing each week. It was announced recently that the automobile manufacturers had reached the enormous production of 2,400,000 passenger cars the first eight months of this year, with another quarter of a million of motor trucks.

Realizing that it would have a monster problem to contend with this year, the Baltimore & Ohio began in May last to prepare its employes to launch upon a campaign of education in an effort to point out to the automobile driver the necessity of care at highway grade crossings. The campaign, known as the Careful Crossing Campaign and engaged in by all the railroads of the nation, was started June 1, and from that time on, employes of the Baltimore & Ohio lost no opportunity to bring the objects of the drive to the attention of every operator.

But it was not to be a one-sided campaign. The employes themselves were given to understand that they should do all in their power to prevent accidents. Engineers were personally solicited by their superiors to sound whistles and ring bells before approaching every highway grade crossing. Trainmen, signalmen, even the clerks, were asked to observe dangerous crossings and report any that were in need of repair.

Observers were sent out to check up engineers as to the proper sounding of crossing signals. Other observers watched automobile drivers and noted down those who did not use precautions to safeguard themselves. No stone was left unturned to enlist the help of every employe and the results indicate that everyone did his part.

There were several accidents involving casualties during the three summer months that indicated the lack of caution, or pure forgetfulness or thoughtless, on the part of automobile drivers.

Four women were returning from a card party in a sedan. The woman driving and her companion in the front seat had their heads turned talking to the women in the rear seat when they came to the railroad crossing. There was a watchman there and the driver of the car was accustomed to go over the crossing several times daily, yet she carelessly drove upon the tracks, the machine was struck by a train and the two women in the front seat were killed and the two in the rear seat injured.

Five persons were killed and one injured out of six persons in a truck when the driver sent his car over the tracks after he had stopped to let a freight train pass. A passenger train on the opposite track struck the machine as it emerged from behind the caboose of the freight train. Had he waited until he got a clear view of the approaching train the accident would not have occurred.

Two men were killed in their machine when they dashed down a road they were familiar with and tried to get over ahead of a train they saw coming at 25 miles an hour. Their machine struck the side of the locomotive, which was thrown from the tracks.

Analysis of reports of accidents that have occurred in the first seven months of this year on the Baltimore & Ohio shows conclusively that it is not the driver in the city who is responsible for accidents at highway grade crossings. Of the ten largest cities on this railroad system, there was not a crossing casualty in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cleveland and Toledo.

In Baltimore, where there are a number of crossings and extremely heavy traffic, in 1923 up to August 1 there was only one automobile struck by a train. That was a truck. Twenty-eight automobiles ran into and broke the crossing gates and two others ran into the sides of trains passing over the crossings. No other large city on the system has such a low record of machines struck, but only in the vicinity of Pittsburg have more gates been run into and broken.

NEW YORK—Protests are "pouring in" upon August Belmont and officials of the Jockey Club that unless the horse Zev, owned by Harry Sinclair is permitted to race My Own," when the committee of the Jockey Club meets October 9 to choose America's entrant in the $100,000 international race, My Own, belonging to Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson will be chosen.

Brigadier General William Mitchell, in a published letter, declared "men who care nothing for racing look on the coming test as an excellent method of cementing relations between England and America, and hope to see the race made an annual affair."

UNCLE SAM STUDIES FEET OF THE WORLD

Commerce Department Finds Shoe Leather Used the Same in Brazil as at Thebes—American Shoes Supreme.

IN HIS efforts to build up the foreign trade of the United States Uncle Sam is making a thorough study of the feet of the world. He is finding out which nations have long, narrow feet, which have short, broad feet, which have thick feet and which have thin.

Incidentally he is learning things about the foot customs of the globe that throw a bright light on the habits of the ancient Assyrians and Egyptians and which make the characters of Babylonian dancers and Roman emperors seem familiar ones.

Through the Bureau of Domestic and Foreign Commerce at Washington, linking the activities of consuls in all quarters of the world, he is finding out social tendencies and pedestrian requirements purely for the benefit of American manufacturers of shoe leather. In his own precise language, he is making a world survey of the boot and shoe industry, but it is really more than that. Uncle Sam is resurrecting the ghosts of the past and determining the shape of footprints that the ghosts of the future will leave behind them on the sands of time.

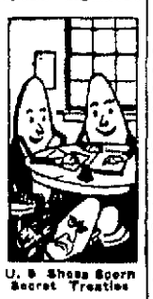
The Footprints of Father Time

The Shoe and Leather Manufactures Division of the Bureau is in charge of the survey, which has been under way for some time and which will be concluded in the near future. It has numerous reports from consuls in the various districts of Germany, France, Italy, Greece, Mexico, Jamaica, Peru, Bolivia, Holland, Brazil, Venezuela and other countries. They give very definite facts for the guidance of American manufacturers in conquering world trade. They also hold a great deal of romance and historical charm for those who care to study them analytically.

The manufacturer is delighted because they show beyond argument that American styles and the American-built shoe are in the ascendancy in every corner of the globe.

Invading Europe

They are invading Europe. Since the war, Uncle Sam has learned, the German shoe has changed from the long, square appearance that formerly distinguished it and the Germans are making and wearing the pointed toe and long "vamp" that distinguish the American one.



U. S. Shoes Scorn Secret Treaties

The French, who lean toward short shoes with high heels, brief vamps and rounded toes, still cling fondly to this style; but the American contour is making big inroads even here, according to the reports of consuls. The short vamp and high heels were originally adopted for the purpose of shortening perspective and leading to deception as to the size of the foot. They are a sort of secret diplomacy. That they are giving place to the frank American confession of actual size seems to indicate that in shoes the doctrine of "open covenants openly arrived at" is attaining success.

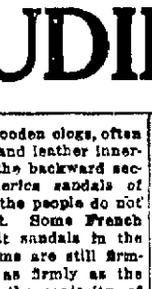
Leather Most Used

The only American departure that is not being taken up to any extent is that of the substitution of other materials for leather. The majority of the world has always trod on leather and apparently is determined to continue doing so. In some of the older sections of Europe wooden clogs, often with leather uppers and leather innersoles, are used. In the backward sections of South America sandals of rope are used when the people do not go entirely barefoot. Some French housewives used felt sandals in the house. These customs are still firmly entrenched, just as firmly as the use of leather for the majority of purposes. They give one of the evidences the bureau is uncovering of the essentially unchanging character of human nature.

Shoes Classed With "Valuables"

This is further exemplified by a custom of Jamaica, where shoes are considered by the natives to be a considerable luxury. It is not uncommon on that island to see natives on their way to church or to a social gathering carrying their shoes in their hands. When they arrive at their destination they ceremoniously put them on and enter into the business of the occasion. An identical custom was observed in early Egypt. Men of rank in going from place to place were followed by servants who carried sandals. When occasion warranted these sandals were gravely placed on the aristocratic feet of their owners.

Brazil brings a parallel to Biblical times and to those of the Roman Empire. Brightly colored shoes, such as those mentioned in Exodus of "ram's hide dyed red," are dear to the Brazilian heart. And Brazilian damsels follow the custom of Julius Cæsar, descendant of the Albanian Kings, who was the only Roman entitled to wear red shoes seven days a week. Even the New York girl would recently have considered it a hardship if she had to obey the rule that even the noblest Roman in Cæsar's time observed on pain of death. That was to wear red shoes on no more than one day a week.



At Shrine of The Red Shoe

The persistence of the sandal and of the low shoe that approximates the sandal in the warmer countries of South America and even in southern France adds its testimony, too, to the perfection with which the earliest men in history solved the best use of shoe leather.

Leather Sandals Persist

In La Guaira, Venezuela, about nine-tenths of the inhabitants wear, according to the consul there, "sandals consisting of a heelless sole leather sole and a cloth top which covers the fore part of the foot. A cloth heel-strap holds the sandal in place." These sandals, or "alpargatas," if they were found beside his bed on arising by the earliest Egyptian of them all, would not amaze him. Egyptian shoes were made just that way.

In the region of Bordeaux, France, on the other side of the world, there is a sandal called the "Kneipp," which is very popular. It is of calf leather, with ornamented vamp and fastened with a strap, very much after the fashion of the most ancient people. Another type, called the "Charentaise," is made of heavy felt, with a leather sole, and it is just as popular in Bordeaux as it would have been at Thebes. Nor are these sandals a fad of the moment. They have tradition behind them.

Fashion in design and color is an important factor in every country. The variety of native habits revealed proves the merit of American shoes in being able to make inroads against them.

The consul at La Paz, Bolivia, reports the making of special shoes with very high tops and heels, and of colored leather. They are for the "cholo" women and as with all Bolivian shoes have very high insteps.

The consul at Callao, Lima, Peru, reports the shoes made for men are broad, short, high heeled, flashily finished and with many differently colored uppers.

"Quality," he writes, "is not the ruling factor in purchase, since five or six pairs of fancy shoes register higher socially than two or three pairs of plain quality shoes."

Rome reports that in Italian shoes the style and cut are extremely varied. Short, broad lasts seem most popular, while patent leathers, odd colors and fancy tops appeal to most buyers.

Returning to South America there is found an interesting survey of shoes in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, the Paris of that continent. The heat results in most men's shoes being oxfords, very few high shoes being made. Most of the women's shoes are pumps. Special style shoes, which sell for only a short time and are replaced by new designs are the rule here as in other mercurial countries.

"In the past," reports the consul, "the people always desired a shape which would make their feet look small. This is still true in the case of women's shoes although recently a sharp pointed shoe was introduced which met with considerable success."

The Sandal is Always There

In Rio the principal colors are tan, black and white. Sport shoes of tan and white with outstanding designs are in moderate demand.

"These sport shoes," it is reported, "are made more for show than for comfort as is commonly the case in the United States. On account of the Centennial Exposition there was considerable demand for women's ballroom shoes embroidered with varicolored beads. The most common colors used were gold and silver. Bright colored beaded shoes in varied designs are usually made to order. Congress boots are produced in moderate qualities for sale in the interior of the country."

From France came the following reports, among others. The consul at Bordeaux writes:

All Honor to American Shoe

"Formerly French boots and shoes had a very short vamp, and such shoes are still sold to a great extent. However, the present tendency is toward the American style with its long vamp, and the best ready-made shoes manufactured in France today are identical with the American styles."

The consul general at Havre reports that style is the dominant factor in trade and that quality and comfort are of only secondary importance. "The outstanding features of all French styles," he reports, "are round toes, short vamps and extremely high heels."

Reports from Germany are typified by that from the consul at Dresden. "The shoes manufactured in Germany," he states, "can scarcely, if at all, be differentiated from the American product. This is in marked contrast to the situation which existed until the outbreak of the war, when German shoes still had a long, square appearance and could be readily distinguished from the American product."

Our Beautiful Feet

It is likely that as a result of Uncle Sam's present study the beauty of the world's feet will be improved. From various places, in South America particularly, come reports of a short, broad, thick foot that is far from the standards of beauty he believes in. It is probably due to the style of shoes that have been used. That the American foot seems more beautiful even to the possessor of the aforesaid stubby feet, seems proved by the universal liking the peoples of the earth are showing, both by purchase and imitation, for the American way of shaping shoe leather.

STRANGE RULE COMES TO END

South Rhodesia Granted Right of Self-Government.

GOVERNED BY CORPORATION

South Rhodesia, to which Great Britain has just granted the right of self-government, was expected to be a second Rand, but has turned out a South African Kansas, observes a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"At present South Rhodesia has a government like none other in the world. It discloses the only instance where a great corporation the British South Africa company, governs a vast and populous country in which a considerable white population is actively engaged in business, politics and farming. Hitherto and elsewhere that form of government has been reserved for native, and usually backward, peoples.

"The country's future status came up automatically at this time under the charter granted by Victoria at the behest of Cecil Rhodes, which charter provided that at the end of 25 years or at the end of any subsequent ten year period, it might be renewed altered or annulled. The quarter century expired in 1914, when it was reaffirmed. Discussions about action to be taken in 1934 brough the announcement that the country is to join the family of British states.

"It is hard to realize how far South Africa has emerged from a 'dark continent' status, and South Rhodesia's rise has been kaleidoscopic. Should an airplane land you today at its metropolis Bulawayo, you might be invited to lecture about your trip before a group of gentlemen in evening dress. You would find the conveniences of a modern hostelry in Bulawayo's big hotel.

Pain in Head! Cut Off a Head!

"Stroll down a broad, paved electric-lighted street, however and you would encounter many natives, peaceable and nearly nude. Less than fifty years ago the blood-thirsty Lobengula held sway over the war-like Matabeles. This crotchety chief had an idea that a pain could be cured by the sacrifice of a head from any chance passerby.

"With the finesse of a William Penn, Cecil Rhodes bought the mining rights to Lobengula's domain for a monthly pension, a thousand rifles and some ammunition. But the empire builder's most famous exploit occurred many years later in this, his namesake colony. After a native outbreak was put down by Lord Pinmer and 800 soldiers the tribesmen took to the Matopos mountains. Thither marched Rhodes, with only two companions unarmed, and camped along the hills until he had interviewed every important chief and concluded a peace. For two months he remained surrounded by fierce, blood thirsty savages.

"While in these mountains on that precarious mission Rhodes is said to have selected the site of his world famous burial place, which he called 'the view of the world.' Between two great boulders is the mountain top grave with the simple inscription, 'Here Lie the Remains of Cecil John Rhodes.'

"A second grave that of Dr. Jameson, recalled the occasion when this slight, bald mild little man led his heroic handful of men in first the Matabeles at Bulawayo. There the savage hordes made their last stand after a series of forays against settlers. Jameson wired Rhodes for advice and got the laconic reply 'Read Luke fourteen thirty one.'

"Jameson sent for a missionary Bible and found this injunction 'Or what king going to make war against another king sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he may be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand.' Jameson wired back in substance, 'All right I have read it,' and then planted the British flag firmly in Bulawayo and crushed Lobengula's power.

"Everybody knows in an academic way, of South Rhodesia's great natural spectacle the Victoria falls, Glibly reciting its dimensions—a mile wide and from 250 to nearly 400 feet high—means little. The imaginative person might stand on Capitol Hill in Washington look at the Capitol's dome and try to visualize a sheet of water higher than that dome extending all the way from the Capitol, down Pennsylvania avenue, to the White House.

Bridge Publicity Device

"Even then he would miss the roar audible ten miles away and the feel of the mist which carries almost as far.

"The many sided Cecil Rhodes had an eye for publicity. It was he who insisted that the bridge should be built near enough to the falls so the spray would wet the cars as trains rolled by. Engineers told him no' as they told Harriman when he proposed his wild scheme of a bridge across Great Salt lake. Both Rhodes and Harriman had their way.

"But in his hope for South Rhodesia's future Rhodes was mistaken. The colony prospered but not from the mines as Rhodes expected. In [illegible] grazing lands are [illegible] drew the 33,000 white [illegible] more area enough, even with nearly [illegible],000 natives to be given the reins [illegible] ernment."

EXPLAIN WHY DOGS HOWL

Scientists Declare Canine Occasionally Reverts to Savagery of His Ancestor, the Wolf.

What makes your dog lift up his nose and howl? It's the wolf in him, say scientists.

For every dog no matter what his breed has a strain of wolf in him, a wolf having been the far-off father of all dogs. And just as a reasonable human being will sometimes give way to primitive instinct under the influence of some violent emotion so the best trained dog will occasionally revert to the savagery of his ancestor, the wolf.

Exactly as a man will often raise his hand in unconscious imitation of his cavemen forebear so your pet dog will at times show the instincts of his parent wolf. Watch your dog turn around and around before lying down before a fire just as the wolf makes himself a lair, listen to him howl as the wolf howls.

The pointer is only an exaggerated instance of man's improvement on the original dog or wolf. Every dog passes before his spring, man selected to breed from the dog which passed the longest and so in time arrived at a dog which pointed and didn't spring at all. The greyhound is another instance, for his particular job he [illegible] ed little scent and little brain but perfect eyesight and speed. By selecting only those dogs which possessed these qualities the present type was reached. But every dog, wherever he lives or whatever use man is making of him comes from the common source, the wolf.

The Irish of It.

It was during the dry spell and a shower having come up, Doctor Blank remarked to his gardener: "This rain will do a lot of good, Patrick."

"It will that, sorr," returned Pat. "Shure an hour of it now will do more good in five minutes than a month of it would do in a week at any other time."

Stage Set for Game With Washington High Tomorrow

Coker Gridders Have Completed Week of Hard Practice; Seem Improved.

MASS MEETING IS HELD

The stage is all set for the biggest football game so far offered fans this season—the clash between the Washington High School and the Connellsville High School teams at Fayette Field. It will be staged tomorrow afternoon at Fayette Field.

This afternoon the students were called together in a mass meeting. A big cheer practice was scheduled, following a talk by a member of the alumni. The football spirit is taking hold with the entrance of the team into the stiffer parts of its schedule.

Just what will be the line-up is a matter of conjecture Coach Lerew has been trying various combinations in order to secure the most power and drive. Those who have watched the team in practice this week believe a marked improvement in the offense will be apparent tomorrow. The defense should still prove strong the showing last week indicating it was finding itself.

Washington, slightly crippled by injuries to players is still a dangerous foe. None know it better than the Coker gridders. It will be the first game for the visitors but work-outs with the W. & J. freshmen have fitted the squad for the hard work ahead.

The biggest student cheering section of the season is looked for. An unusually large crowd of city fans is also anticipated. Washington being regarded as one of the leading High School teams in the W. P. I. A. League.

Tornadoes Will Open On Sunday

The first Sunday football game ever staged in this end of the county will be played October 7 by the Wabash football team of Pittsburg and the Connellsville Elk Tornadoes. It will be just outside the city limits at Elk Field, on top of Limestone Hill.

The ministerial association of the city has taken steps to have the Sunday games blocked but no action in time to prevent the Wabash-Tornado clash day after tomorrow is expected and it will be played unless something unforseen does prevent. The team continued its steady practice last night and will be in shape to give a good account of itself.

It is impossible to judge the line-up There have been a number of candidates in uniform since the work-outs began and many of these are stars. There are possibilities of one of the best independent teams in Western Pennsylvania if the team continues throughout the season.

Star Weight Thrower

Pat J. McDonald, N. Y. A. C., held both of his titles in the senior track and field meet of the Metropolitan association of the A. A. U., putting the 16-pound shot 40 feet 8½ inches, breaking his own record made in 1911, and throwing the 56-pound weight 38 feet 2 inches.

CONFLUENCE LOOKS FOR HOT GAME WITH D. T. H. S. SATURDAY

CONFLUENCE, Oct. 5.—By scoring a decided victory over Boswell High School on Saturday, September 29, the Confluence High School football team got away to a good start for the season. Boswell won the toss and chose to receive. At once the Boswellites opened a forward passing attack but were unable to make the distance for first down. A grounded pass gave the ball to Confluence but a stab at center for a five-yard gain was lost because the Confluence back fumbled when tackled and Boswell recovered. Confluence held and soon had possession of the ball again and within a few minutes had carried the ball over for the first touchdown.

The game was featured by the continued unsuccessful attempts at forward passes by Boswell and the team work of Confluence. Only two outstanding plays featured the game. The one was when Younkin got away for a long run around left end and the other when Fike blocked a punt near the center of the field and Van Sickle recovered near the goal line. Both these gains were turned into touchdowns. At no time during the game was the Confluence goal line threatened.

The game was played at the Jenner Fair Grounds and was witnessed by a large crowd.

When Dunbar Township High School invades the local territory on October 6 the Confluence gridders promise to be ready for what promises to be the toughest game of the season.

In the Realm of Sports.

Tris Speaker, gray-haired manager of the Cleveland Indians, yesterday broke the world record for double-base blows. In the game with St. Louis, which Cleveland won 9-1, yesterday he made his 57th two-bagger of the season, breaking the record of 53 established by Ed. Delehanty, of Philadelphia, in 1899. He also scored four runs in his four trips to the plate, hitting a home run and singling three times.

The Detroit Tigers lost to Chicago yesterday, 5-0 and lost a little ground in the chase for second place in the American League as Cleveland, just one point ahead yesterday, won its game with St. Louis

Hitting Merely Matter of Nerve, Says Wheat

Hitting depends entirely on a player's nerve, in the opinion of Zack Wheat, heavy hitting outfielder of the Brooklyn National league club.

"A player who lacks courage always can be found well down in the averages," says Wheat. "Baseball's best hitters, like Ruth, Cobb, Speaker, Hornsby, Heilmann and Roush, are both nervy and confident. They know how to pull themselves out of a batting slump.

"When I fail to hit I know I am doing something wrong at the plate and try to correct the fault. I know there isn't anything the matter with the bat, the ball or the umpire. It is my own fault and no one can make me get back into my stride except old man Wheat himself."

"Highest Paid Batboy" in History of Baseball

The St. Louis Cards have unearthed a real star in Howard Freigan. Freigan, who served as a bat boy part of last season is regarded as one of the most promising recruits to come up in the majors in St. Louis in years He is only twenty years old His hitting has been timely, and his defensive play has been described as spectacular.

He was born at Dayton, O., and signed by the Cardinals while attending college. He was turned over to the Syracuse Internationals, but was recalled late last season. Not being in the lineup, he voluntarily handled the bats and was referred to as the "highest paid bat-boy" in baseball.

This season he has been placed regularly at short because of the incapacitation of John Lavan by illness.

Prize Boner Pulled by Sam Hale of Athletics

The prize boner of recent date was pulled by Sam Hale of the Athletics in the game with the White Sox on August 7. Paul Castner, the Notre Dame recruit, was pitching for the Sox. With McGowan on first Castner let loose the wildest sort of a wild pitch. McGowan started a tour of the bases. But Sam Hale, sitting near the Athletics' bench, courteously stopped the wayward ball and handed it to Ray Schalk Eddie Collins, alive to the situation, came in and claimed interference by Hale. So McGowan was sent back to first base and Castner didn't get "credit" for a wild pitch. McGowan would have reached third by all accounts had Hale not had his dumb spell.

GIANTS AND YANKEES ON EVEN TERMS IN OUTFIELD

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Neither the New York Giants nor the Yankees have a particularly brilliant outfield. It would be too much to expect that any major league team could present a combination like that former Boston trio of Hooper, Speaker and Lewis, but the outer defenses that will work in the world's series are not as good as the boundary guardians of the Cincinnati Reds or any better than that owned by several other clubs

In outfielders who are to carry a most important part of the defense, both teams are fairly even in strength and neither combination is as well balanced as it might be desired.

The power of both outfields is found in rightfield, where Ross Young and Babe Ruth have been playing regularly for the rival clubs. Taking his record through the past season, Rut his a more brilliant player and of more value to his club, but remembering what he did in the past two series Ruth might be turned down by many fans in favor of Young

"Pep" Young is one of the few real stars on the Giant team. He is a hustler, one of the most aggressive players on the team, a good fielder, a dangerous hitter and a daring base runner. In the opinion of many experts he is one of the best players in the game.

Ruth, this season, has been doing everything that Young does, only he has been better in throwing. Young hasn't an unusually strong arm, whereas, next to Bob Meusel, Ruth perhaps has the best outfield whip in baseball.

Centerfield is not so easy to compare as it is not known what player of the three that he has been alternating all season McGraw will decide to start.

Casey Stengel because of his ability as a "money player," perhaps may be preferred by the Giant leader over young Jimmy O'Connell, who played all season like anything but a $75,000 ball player.

Where Stengel is a reliable fielder and a dangerous batter, O'Connell is neither. The California youngster is woefully weak on ground balls, he is slow in starting in on a ball and unsteady in going back. His arm is very poor and he has been carrying a mental hazard to the bat with him all season. Stengel is not possessed of a great arm, but with either O'Connell or the "Casey" in centerfield the arm weakness is overcome by the wonderful arm of George Kelly, who runs back and takes the throw for a relay to the plate

Bill Cunningham is a great young ball player and many fans have never been able to figure why McGraw does not use him regularly. He is only started against lefthanded pitchers but he has shown ability to hit righthanders when called upon and it seems strange that he hasn't been given more of a chance to star. Many critics look upon him as the best fielder on the club.

With Cunningham in center, the Giant centerfield would be preferred to the Yankees. Whitey Witt, the Yankee centerfielder, is the fastest man in the league getting down to first base and he is a good lead-off man. He is not too brainy on the bases, however.

The Meusel brothers, Irish and Bob, will be in charge of the leftfield patrol and there is little to choose between them.

Irish is a better "money" player, and for the reason that he has done more when it meant most, he has a slight edge on his younger brother.

In reserve strength the Giants are better fortified as they have Stengel, Cunningham and Shinners to fall back upon, while the Yanks have Elmer Smith, only a fair fielder and a spasmodic hitter, and two rookies, Haines and Hendricks, to step into an emergency.

If Babe Ruth hits as he has been hitting all season, he will be worth the whole Giant outfield, but if he does not improve upon his 1921 and 1922 form, the Giant outfield will be much more effective.

There must be some special diet for second basemen in Chicago that makes them fast on their feet. Eddie Collins of the White Sox and George Grantham of the Cubs lead both leagues in stolen bases. They must eat hops three meals a day.

Chick Evans as Model

Chick Evans, noted golf star, was selected as the model for the golfing figure surmounting a sun dial, which is to be dedicated in Jackson park, Chicago, by the golfing fraternity of the Chicago district, as emblematic of "the spirit of the game." Evans is said to most truly typify the spirit of golf and the sun dial is to be a constant reminder for all generations of this great sport.

Do You Believe This?

In the early days of baseball (1859 and 1860), an umpire was highly honored, was accorded the utmost courtesy by the players, and accepted as one of the distinguished men of the city. An easy chair was provided him near the home plate, and he was given a fan on hot days Absolute comfort for an umpire was uppermost in the minds of the players.

THREE MEN AND A MAID

by P. G. Wodehouse

Illustrations by Irwin Myers

Copyright, by George H. Doran Co.

The note fluttered to the ground. Webster, picking it up and handing it back, was enabled to get a glimpse of the first two sentences. They confirmed his suspicions. The note was hot stuff. Assuming that it continued as it began, it was about the warmest thing of its kind that pen had ever written. Webster had received one or two heated epistles from the sex in his time—your man of gallantry can hardly hope to escape these unpleasantnesses—but none had got off the mark quite so swiftly, and with quite so much frigid violence as this.

"Thanks," said Sam, mechanically.

"Not at all, sir. You are very welcome.

Sam resumed his reading. A cold perspiration broke out on his forehead. His toes curled, and something seemed to be crawling down the small of his back. His heart had moved from its proper place and was now beating in his throat. He swallowed once or twice to remove the obstruction, but without success. A kind of pall had descended on the landscape, blotting out the sun.

Of all the rotten sensations in this world, the worst is the realization that a thousand-to-one chance has come off, and caused our wrong-doing to be detected. There had seemed no possibility of that little ruse of his being discovered, and yet here was Billie in full possession of the facts. It almost made the thing worse that she did not say how she had come into possession of them. This gave Sam that feeling of self-pity, that sense of having been ill-used by fate, which makes the bringing home of crime so particularly poignant.

"Fine day!" he muttered. He had a sort of subconscious feeling that it was imperative to keep engaging Webster in light conversation.

"Yes, sir. Weather still keeps up," agreed the valet suavely.

Sam frowned over the note. He felt injured. Sending a fellow notes didn't give him a chance. If she had come in person and denounced him it would not have been an agreeable experience, but at least it would have been possible then to have pleaded and cajoled and—and all that sort of thing. But what could he do now? It seemed to him that his only possible course was to write a note in reply, begging her to see him. He explored his pockets and found a pencil and a scrap of paper. For some moments he scribbled desperately. Then he folded the note.

"Will you take this to Miss Bennett," he said, holding it out.

Webster took the missive, because he wanted to read it later at his leisure; but he shook his head.

"Useless, I fear, sir," he said gravely.

"What do you mean?"

"I am afraid it would effect little or nothing, sir, sending our Miss B. notes. She is not in the proper frame of mind to appreciate them. I saw her face when she handed me the letter you have just read, and I assure you, sir, she is not in a malleable mood."

"You seem to know a lot about it!"

"I have studied the sex, sir," said Webster modestly.

"I mean, about my business, confound it! You seem to know all about it!"

"Why, yes sir, I think I may say that I have grasped the position of affairs. And, if you will permit me to say so, sir, you have my respectful sympathy."

Dignity is a sensitive plant which flourishes only under the fairest conditions. Sam's had perished in the bleak east wind of Billie's note. In other circumstances he might have resented this intrusion of a stranger into his most intimate concerns. His only emotion now, was one of dull but distinct gratitude. The four winds of heaven blew chilly upon his raw and unprotected soul, and he wanted to wrap it up in a mantle of sympathy, careless of the source from which he borrowed that mantle. If Webster, the valet, felt disposed, as he seemed to indicate, to comfort him, let the thing go on. At that moment Sam would have accepted condolences from a coal heaver.

"I was reading a story—one of the Nosegay Novelettes; I do not know if you are familiar with the series, sir?—in which much the same situation occurred. It was entitled 'Cupid or Mammon?' The heroine, Lady Blanche Trefusis, forced by her parents to wed a wealthy suitor, dispatches a note to her humble lover, informing him it cannot be. I believe it often happens like that, sir."

"You're all wrong," said Sam. "It's not that at all."

"Indeed, sir? I supposed it was."

"Nothing like it! I—I—"

Sam's dignity, on its death-bed, made a last effort to assert itself.

"I don't know what it's got to do with you!"

"Precisely, sir," said Webster, with dignity. "Just as you say! Good afternoon, sir!"

He swayed gracefully, conveying a suggestion of departure without moving his feet. The action was enough for Sam. Dignity gave an expiring gurgle, and passed away, regretted by all.

"Don't go!" he cried.

The idea of being alone in this infernal lane, without human support, overpowered him. Moreover, Webster had personality. He exuded it. Already Sam had begun to cling to him in spirit, and rely on his support.

"Don't go!"

"Certainly not, if you do not wish it, sir."

Webster coughed gently, to show his appreciation of the delicate nature of the conversation. He was consumed with curiosity, and his threatened departure had been but a pretense. A team of horses could not have moved Webster at that moment.

"Might I ask, then what . . .?"

"There's been a misunderstanding," said Sam. "At least, there was, but now there isn't, if you see what I mean."

"I fear I have not quite grasped your meaning, sir."

"Well, I—I—played a sort of—you might almost call it a sort of trick on Miss Bennett. With the best motives, of course!"

"Of course, sir!"

"And she's found out. I don't know how she's found out, but she has. So there you are!"

"Of what nature would the trick be, sir? A species of ruse, sir—some kind of innocent deception?"

"Well, it was like this."

It was a complicated story to tell, and Sam, a prey to conflicting emotions, told it badly; but such was the almost superhuman intelligence of Webster, that he succeeded in grasping the salient points. Indeed, he said that it reminded him of something of much the same kind in the Nosegay Novelette, "All for Her," where the hero, anxious to win the esteem of the lady of his heart, had bribed a tramp to simulate an attack upon her in a lonely road.

"The principle's the same," said Webster.

"Well what did he do when she found out?"

"She did not find out, sir. All ended happily, and never had the wedding bells in the old village church rung out a blither peal than they did at the subsequent union."

Sam was thoughtful.

"Bribed a tramp to attack her, did he?"

"Yes, sir. She had never thought much of him till that moment, sir. Very cold and haughty she had been, his social status being considerably inferior to her own. But, when she cried for help, and he dashed out from behind a hedge, well, it made all the difference."

"I wonder where I could get a good tramp," said Sam, meditatively.

Webster shook his head.

"I really would hardly recommend such a procedure, sir."

"No, it would be difficult to make a tramp understand what you wanted."

Sam brightened.

"I've got it! You pretend to attack her, and I'll . . ."

"I couldn't, sir! I couldn't really! I should jeopardize my situation."

"Oh, come! Be a man!"

"No, sir, I fear not. There's a difference between handing in your resignation—I was compelled to do that only recently, owing to a few words I had with the gun-nor, though subsequently prevailed upon to withdraw it—I say there's a difference between handing in your resignation and being given the sack, and that's what would happen—without a character, what's more, and lucky if it didn't mean a prison cell. No, sir; I could not contemplate such a thing."

"Then I don't see that there's anything to be done," said Sam morosely.

"Oh, I shouldn't say that, sir," said Webster, encouragingly. "It's simply a matter of finding the way. The problem confronting us—you, I should say . . ."

"Us," said Sam. "Most decidedly us."

"Thank you very much, sir. I would not have presumed, but if you say so—The problem confronting us, as I envisage it, resolves itself into this. You have offended our Miss B. and she has expressed a disinclination ever to see you again. How, then, is it possible, in spite of her attitude, to recapture her esteem?"

"Exactly," said Sam.

"There are several methods which occur to one . . ."

"They don't occur to me!"

"Well, for example, you might rescue her from a burning building as in 'True as Steel.' . . ."

"Set fire to the house, eh?" said Sam, reflectively. "Yes, there might be something in that."

"I would hardly advise such a thing," said Webster, a little hastily—flattered at the readiness with which his disciple was taking his advice, yet acutely alive to the fact that he stept at the top of the house himself.

"A little drastic, if I may say so. It might be better to save her from drowning, as in 'The Earl's Secret'."

"Ah, but where could she drown?"

"Well, there is a lake in the grounds . . ."

"Excellent!" said Sam. "Terrific! I know I could rely on you. Say no more! The whole thing's settled. You take her out rowing on the lake, and upset the boat. I plunge in . . . I suppose you can swim?"

"No, sir."

"Oh? Well, never mind. You'll manage somehow, I expect. Cling to the upturned boat or something. I shouldn't wonder. There's always a way. Yes, that's the plan. When is the earliest you could arrange this?"

"I fear such a course must be considered out of the question, sir. It really wouldn't do."

"I can't see a flaw in it."

"Well, in the first place, it would certainly jeopardise my situation . . ."

"Oh, hang your situation! You talk as if you were prime minister or something. You can easily get another situation. A valuable man like you," said Sam, ingratiatingly.

"No, sir," said Webster firmly. "From boyhood up I've always had a regular horror of the water. I can't swim, so as to speak, a stroke. I have an uneasy feeling."

The image of Webster paddling was arresting enough to occupy Sam's thoughts for a moment. It was an inspiring picture, and for an instant uplifted his spirits. Then they fell again.

"Well, I don't see what there is to be done," he said, gloomily. "It's no good making suggestions, if you have some frivolous objection to all of them."

"My idea," said Webster, "would be something which did not involve my own personal and active co-operation, sir. If it is all the same to you, I should prefer to limit my assistance to advice. I am anxious to help, but I am a man of regular habits, which I do not wish to disturb. Did you ever read 'Footpaths of Fate,' in the Nosegay series, sir? I've only just remembered it, and it contains the most helpful suggestion of the lot. There had been a misunderstanding between the heroine and the hero—their names have slipped my mind, though I fancy his was Cyril—and she had told him to hop it . . ."

"To what?"

"To leave her for ever, sir. And what do you think he did?"

"How the deuce do I know?"

"He kidnaped her little brother, sir, to whom she was devoted, kept him hidden for a bit, and then returned him, and in her gratitude all was forgotten and forgiven, and never . . ."

"I know. Never had the bells of the old village church . . ."

"Rung out a blither peal. Exactly, sir. Well there, if you will allow me to say so, you are, sir! You need seek no further for a plan of action."

"Miss Bennett hasn't got a little brother."

"No, sir. But she has a dog, and is greatly attached to it."

Sam stared. From the expression on his face it was evident that Webster imagined himself to have made a suggestion of exceptional intelligence. It struck Sam as the silliest he had ever heard.

"You mean I ought to steal her dog?"

"Precisely, sir."

"But, good heavens! Have you seen that dog?"

"The one to which I allude is a small brown animal with a fluffy tail."

"Yes, and a bark like a steam siren, and, in addition to that, about eighty-five teeth, all sharper than razors. I couldn't get within ten feet of that dog without its lifting the roof off, and, if I did, it would chew me into small pieces."

"I had anticipated that difficulty, sir. In 'Footpaths of Fate' there was a nurse who assisted the hero by drugging the child."

"By Jove!" said Sam, impressed.

"He rewarded her," said Webster, allowing his gaze to stray nonchalantly over the country-side, "liberally, very liberally."

"If you mean that you expect me to reward you if you drug the dog," said Sam, "don't worry. Let me bring this thing off, and you can have all I've got, and my cuff-links as well. Come, now, this is really beginning to look like something. Speak to me more of this matter. Where do we go from here?"

"I beg your pardon, sir?"

"I mean, what's the next step in the scheme? Oh, Lord!" Sam's face fell. The light of hope died out of his eyes. "It's all off! It can't be done! How could I possibly get into the house? I take it that the little brute sleeps in the house?"

Well Known Connellsville Man Again Well

A MIRACLE HE SAYS

WILLIAM DANDERSON.

The farmers' lot is a hard one at the best. From early morn till night fall there is work to be done. But to have a large farm and be sick at the same time is an almost unbearable hardship.

For the past three years William Danderson, the owner of a large and prosperous farm just outside of the city, a man well known to everyone in Connellsville, has been sick. And during these years he has had to be actively engaged in the running of the farm. His sufferings are due to stomach trouble, rheumatism were multiplied by the physical labor attached to planting and in growing his crops. Then he found Dreco and after taking one bottle he writes this:

"For three years I have been suffering with stomach trouble that made it impossible for me to enjoy a meal. After a night's sleep it was agony for me to rise from the pillow, my joints and back ached so badly.

"Then," he continues, "I heard of Dreco and the wonderful results some people obtained from it. So I bought a bottle.

"Dreco made a new man of me."

Dreco, being a combination of the juices and extracts of herbal plants, combines very readily with the juices of the stomach and that is why it's action is so prompt and so positive. It is soon noticed after taking Dreco the gas stops forming, the food digests perfectly, giving strength to the entire body and renewing vigor and vitality.

Dreco is being specially introduced by Connellsville Drug Company and sold by druggists everywhere. Also for sale by Hoffman's Drug Store in Scottdale.—Advertisement.

Red Cross Relief for Japanese Is Dispatched with Incredible Speed by Experts In America

Within two days after the American Red Cross had begun its campaign for funds to alleviate the suffering of Japanese earthquake victims, the machinery of that organization was functioning perfectly in the matter of purchasing and shipping food, clothing, medical supplies and building materials to the devastated areas.

The man shown above, W. Gordon Brown, who purchased for the American Relief Administration during its humanitarian effort in Russia, from September 1921, to September of this year, was lent to the American Red Cross by his organization for this purpose. He began his work on Thursday, September 6, and on Friday, September 7, the first relief ship, the President Taft, cleared from the Pacific Coast.

Within a few hours after the President Taft had steamed out of San Francisco, Mr. Brown notified John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, and the executive committee of the Red Cross that he had accepted commitments involving the expenditure of $2,422,500. These included the forwarding of funds for the immediate relief of Americans who were caught in the disaster.

Characteristic speed and efficiency have marked the efforts of the American Red Cross in this most recent of the world's great disasters. Designated by President Coolidge as a logical and most desirable channel through which sympathetic Americans might contribute to the millions of homeless and hungry Japanese, the organization has put a thorough machine into every town and city in the United States for the purpose of accomplishing the great task.

With almost incredible speed, subscriptions to the fund began to pour into national headquarters of the Red Cross. The executive committee, which includes John Barton Payne, the chairman; Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and Eliot Wadsworth, assistant secretary of the Treasury, received by Sunday morning, just four days after the drive had begun, information that $8,500,000 had been subscribed. It was the receipt of new advices at that time, telling of the serious plight of the millions of refugees, including thousands of orphans, that prompted Chairman Payne and Secretary Hoover to issue their joint appeal for renewed effort by America to help in the great humanitarian work.

Downward Course Coke Production Continues; Now At 232,960 Tons

Merchants Again Lead in Curtailment; Furnace Plants Make Small Gain.

232 OVENS OF LATTER OUT

Being the Only Change in the Active List; Total Decrease Since June 23, 6,138 Ovens, or 17.5 Per Cent; Loss 73,760 Tons, or 24 Per Cent Output.

Coke production continues to pursue its downward course the decrease of 3,040 tons last week having brought the regional total to 232,960 tons, a new low mark for the year with the exception of the first two weeks of January.

Although the output of the furnace ovens shows the effect of the restrictions applied by the operators comprising that interest, they registered a slight gain, almost the equivalent of the small loss during the week preceding. At the same time the bulk of the decline, as was the case a week earlier, took place at the plants of the merchant producers.

Since the most recent coming on in tonnage began with the week ended September 8, the curtailment has been fairly consistent and regular with each succeeding week. The total cut has been from 256,800 to 232,960 tons, a loss of 23,840 tons. The furnace interests contributed 16,250 tons and the merchants 8,590 tons to make up this reduction.

On June 23 when the maximum production of 306,720 tons was recorded, the furnace plants were running 14,981 ovens or 68.7 per cent of their equipment, the merchant plants 9,948 or 74.7 per cent and the region 24,930 ovens or 70.3 per cent. Last week the active quotas were: Furnace 10,815 or 50 per cent, merchant 7,957, or 60 per cent, region 18,792 or 53.1 per cent. These comparisons show a decrease of 4,199 ovens or 19.7 per cent in furnace ovens, 1,989, or 14.7 per cent in merchant ovens, or a combined decrease of 6,138 ovens or 17.5 per cent. Coincidentally furnace production has dropped from 190,200 to 139,000 tons a decrease of 51,200 tons or 26.8 per cent, merchant production from 116,520 to 93,960 tons a loss of 22,560 tons or 19.3 per cent, regional output from 306,720 to 232,960 tons a loss of 71,760 tons, or 24 per cent.

These decreases measure quite accurately the gradual lessening of demand for coke by merchant consumers and also the reduced requirements of the furnaces owning their own coking plants. Both the tonnage and the percentage of loss of the latter is shown to be materially greater than that of the merchant producers. This evidences the fact that the latter interest has had its trade sustained by consumers outside the merchant furnaces a number of which have become inactive during the past two months.

In terms of the region's capacity to make coke the loss of 73,760 tons over 14 weeks is not excessive. There have been periods when even a greater loss has been sustained by the observance of the Fourth of July or Christmas but that was when 400,000 or more tons were being made each week. Such declines were then made up in the next succeeding week and it was taken as a matter of course. With output now averaging only about 50 per cent of that of earlier years any decline, even in small tonnages becomes more noticeable as significant of the trend or drift in the trade, of which the cumulative decrease of the past few months is an example.

The estimated production of coke during the week ended Saturday, September 29 was 232,960 tons divided between the two districts as follows: Connellsville 131,680 an increase of 2,210 tons, Lower Connellsville 101,280 a decrease of 5,250 tons or a net decrease of 7,010 tons as compared with a total decrease of 3,580 tons during the immediately preceding week.

By interests the production was: Furnace 139,000 a gain of 570 tons, merchant 93,960, a loss of 3,610 tons as compared with losses of 400 and 3,180 tons respectively during the week ended September 22.

There were 232 ovens added to the idle list, all at Orient, an independent furnace operation. There were no changes at the plants of the H. C. Frick Coke Company or the merchant producers. The former ran six days at nine and five days at 27 of its plants making better average time than in the preceding week. Some of merchants ran but two days, a few four, quite a number five and the remainder six days.

Production by the two interests and the total compared with the corresponding week in 1922 is shown here with.

NO LEVEL STREETS IN CITY

Hundreds of Thousands of Chinese Live in Narrowest of Rooms In Chungking

Hundreds of thousands of human beings live in Chungking (on the upper part of the Yangtze river in China) in the very narrowest of rooms. There are no level streets because of the hilly character of the country and in stead of streets thousands of steps end up hill and down dale. Moreover, many of the business streets are so narrow that two litters can hardly squeeze past one another.

The number of water carriers in legion Chungking has not yet attained to a water system. The water for the daily use of the inhabitants is drawn in buckets from the Yangtze and the Futuris Kiang and is peddled to the householders by coolies.

Here even the poorest beggar is saved from hunger. Every beggar man or woman has a specialty designed to arouse the maximum of sympathy in the passer by.
